Shanghai Surprise

Shanghai Steakery, located in Chinatown at 16 N.W. Broadway, has undergone a renaissance of sorts during the past year or two. General manager Jay Mitchell, who took over at the beginning of 2007, is candid about the club's formerly unsavory reputation. "In the past it's been seen as a place where a lot of drug dealing went on," he says.

Mitchell, who describes himself as "not exactly a newcomer to the gay bar scene in Portland," has worked for C.C. Slaughters and Embers in the past, as well as a brief previous stint as manager of the Steakery from 1999 to 2000. Already in his half-year of management, the Steakery has seen new drinks, new staff and drastic improvements in décor.

"We have neon lights and mirrors now where there used to be blank walls," says Mitchell, aka Jay Della Rosa. "Our owner, Timmy Pso, is Chinese, so we've given the upper deck a Chinese flavor to suit his culture."

During the day, the Steakery maintains the ambiance of a family-style gay bar and restaurant, while the wilder things come out to play at night. The first Friday of every month is Club I.T., a free dance and costume party with a variable theme. The Steakery also hosts four or five charity parties throughout the year, such as the Miss Shanghai Pageant, which just took place in April.

Next up June 2 is "Anchors Away," a raffle and party to benefit Camp Starlight and Blackout Leather Productions, coinciding with the Rose Festival Starlight Parade and the hallowed tradition of Fleet Week. A couple of weeks after that, of course, will be Pride. "We're one of only two gay bars that's directly on the route of the Pride parade, since it was moved off Stark Street," says Mitchell. (The other is Embers.)

The Steakery plans to celebrate Pride Weekend with a bingo party Friday, a show Saturday and all-day food and drink specials Sunday. One thing that hasn't changed is that Shanghai Steakery is known for serving some of the stiffest cocktails in a town.

Jay Mitchell has refreshed Shanghai Steakery's drinks, staff and décor since January.
