'Good Times' by Sara Spencer

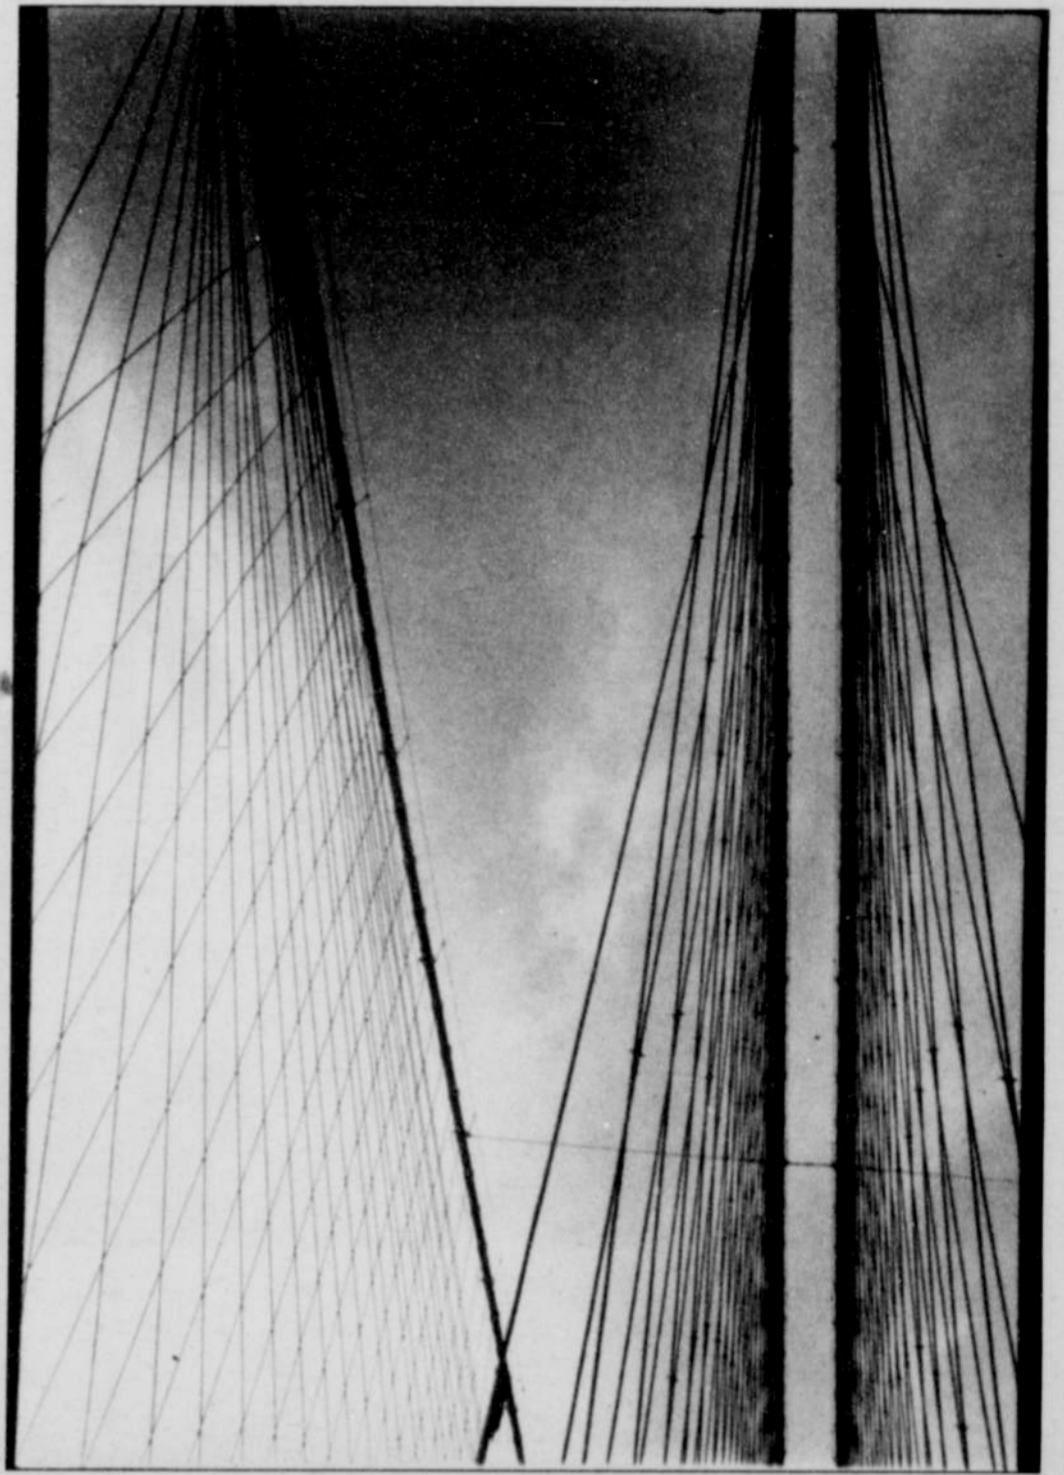

As a lifelong Washington resident, I immediately recognized this image of the Interstate 5 bridge on the Columbia River. The photographer has done a magnificent job capturing the contrast between nature and industry. Both can be so beautiful in the right light. The photo evokes memories of me as a child waiting for the Fourth of July fireworks display to begin while standing not far from that very location.

'Brooklyn Bridge' by Ezekiel Martin

I immediately identified this photograph as the Brooklyn Bridge, yet the angles of the photograph mesmerized me. To me, a bridge resembles numerous notions: a path leading to a new adventure, a symbol of a city and a platform for transportation. I wonder if the photographer was attempting to photograph an actual assignment or if the mission evolved into a random, adventure-filled day. As an avid traveler, I appreciate this suspension bridge that offers travelers and its citizens so much!
