Nude in NoPo

No shirts, no shoes? No problem. North Portland's masculine bar, The Eagle Portland, drops trou and bares all with no indication of shame. Staff and customers can jump right into their birthday suits, bend over and knock some balls into holes. They can also play pool.

"Bear" Naked Billiards every Thursday is Portland's latest nude recreational activity. Sure, the chilly weather might make you shrink away from joining a naked bike ride, but that doesn't mean you still can't grab a bear—er, beer—in the buff. Ever wondered what a Sister of Perpetual Indulgence is packing? Pray no more: Sister Krissy Fiction ("the one who got nailed") will mercifully hike up her habit for a flash of her type of worship.

Not to be confused with The Eagle PDX downtown, this watering hole on 835 N. Lombard St. is a haven for a variety of queers bringing new, unorthodox events into the mix.

Guests are encouraged to name the bar's patio via suggestion box, personally identifying the bar's source of pride and means to enjoy the dismal months outdoors.

"I want to name the patio by a committee," jokes bar owner Pat Lanagan, "like American Idol with a snarky Englishman." Customers can submit their ideas until the newly expanded deck is christened. "Vegas" is a staff favorite...I'm sure what happens there stays there.

Bear-B-Que every Sunday offers free food and $1 draft beers to everyone who attends. But burgers and hot dogs won't be the only pieces of meat you'll find: Hungry men can visually devour the naked bartender—Lanagan, of course—at this amazingly popular event.

Beer Bust, every first Sunday and third Saturday, is another bear-friendly event where members of Oregon Bears get a bottomless cup of domestic beer for $10 and non-members pay $15.

According to Lanagan, North Portland has a great population of gays per capita, perhaps more than any other area of the city, and The Eagle welcomes gays of all shapes and sizes even with its inclination for the daddy/bear types. As North Portland's only gay bar, the Eagle would welcome other establishments, he adds, especially as the community undergoes gentrification.

"We have growth every month," Lanagan says. "We do way too much business for other people not to have their eyes on us."

—Julius Calasicas

The Eagle Portland is a popular hangout for members of the leather community.
