NORTHWEST BRIEFS

be a short speech, followed by the march heading west on Burnside and turning onto Stark Street heading east. The march then gets back onto SW Broadway, past Pioneer Square, turns left onto Madison, and finally gathers at Terry Schunk Plaza.

PERC estimated anywhere between 1,500-3,000 participants in the march, but held out hope that this number could grow larger as the date approaches. The group plans to also hold a large public strategy meeting on November 10 to discuss what has happened since Proposition 8, the outcomes of the Washington and Maine initiatives, and to map a strategy for the future.

Portland Equal Rights Coalition meets every Monday night at 7 p.m. at the Dorothy Day Catholic Workers House (330 SE 11th Ave.) in Southeast Portland. The group is actively looking for more volunteers, and is planning on meeting at The Roxy (1121 SW Stark St.) on Friday, October 16 at 9:30 p.m., and Holocene (1001 SE Morrison St.) during Gaycation on Saturday, October 17 at 9:30 p.m. to distribute fliers and educate people about the march.

Campaign To Recall Sam Adams Update

As Jasun Wurster tallied petitions on Monday, October 5 collected over 90 days of volunteer canvassing, word came of a new recall effort, this time with paid signature collectors and the reported financial backing of over a dozen area business leaders. An organizational meeting was set to take place October 14, though Just Out had no further details, nor names, as of press time.

Chief petitioner and spokesperson Wurster, whose grassroots Community to Recall Sam Adams campaign raised upwards of $18,000 in cash and in-kind donations, said representatives from a new group calling itself Portland Future PAC approached him before the campaign's conclusion about launching a professionally run recall effort.

Over 32,100 signatures were needed by the October 5 deadline to qualify a recall election for the ballot. Wurster claimed he had about 30,000 signatures, collected from over 700 volunteers, which he would turn over to the new group to use as a starting-point for the next signature-gathering campaign. Oregon law does not prohibit a second group from mounting a recall bid.

Portland Future PAC filed paperwork with the Secretary of State's office on Friday, October 10, with plans to submit its own petition to the Portland City Auditor's office by the end of the month. Like Wurster and Co.'s campaign, Portland Future PAC would have 90 days from filing to assemble the required number of valid signatures from registered Portland voters.

Wurster announced he would not play a role in the new effort, and that new leaders would soon step forward, though he, along with Community to Recall Sam Adams Treasurer Theresa McGuire, were listed as contacts for Portland Future PAC. Calls to Wurster and Portland Future PAC had not been returned as of press time. Just Out will continue to follow the story in print and online at www.justout.com.

Imperial Sovereign Rose Court Corona- tion to Name New Rose Emperor. Empress this Weekend

Portland's oldest GLBT organization will hold its 51st coronation Saturday, October 17 at the Melody Ballroom (615 SE Alder St.) to crown Rose Empress LI, and Rose Emperor XXXVI.

Scott Seibert is the only candidate in contention to be crowned Rose Emperor XXXVI during Saturday's ceremony, while Ciara Dela'Rosa and Candi Wrapper are candidates for Rose Empress LI. Were Candi Wrapper—who was crowned Rose Empress XXI 30 years ago—to be crowned, she would be the first Empress to be crowned twice.

The coronation ceremony is themed "From Broadway to Hollywood: A Night of Musicals," and the evening will begin with a Broadway-type production, said Rose Emperor V Frank Schreckenberger, in addition to various invited entertainers.

Friday, October 16 will celebrate decades' past Rose Court royalty at Embers Avenue (110 NW Broadway) for "A Monarch's Reception." The affair begins at 5 p.m. with a no-host bar. The "Out of Town Show" starts at 7 p.m., featuring monarchs from outside of the Imperial Sovereign Rose Court. Tickets are $15.

Past Rose Court royalty will also be a major part of the coronation ceremony, with 50-year anniversary honorees down to 10-year anniversary honorees giving presentations. The ceremony will also commemorate the yearlong reigns of Rose Emperor XXXV J.L. Thompson and Empress L Krystal Lynn Benoit. Voting for the coronation took place on October 11, and the evening will culminate with the announcement of the winners.

"The most important part of the coronation is that it's a celebration of the court's involvement in the community, the extensive fundraising that's been done throughout the year for various charities, and the scholarship," explained Schreckenberger.

Saturday's Coronation 2009 kicks off at 6 p.m. (doors at 5 p.m.). Tickets are $50. Get more information at www.rosecourt.org.
