Topp That

New Zealand documentary yodels into town

After strong film fest showings (including last year's QDoc), everybody's favorite movie about country-singing comic lesbian twins from New Zealand is back in Portland for a weeklong run. The Topp Twins: Untouchable Girls tells the inspiring story of crew-cut Kiwi siblings Jools and Linda, a fiftysomething pair as fearless as they are fun(ny).

Oh, and have we mentioned the yodeling?

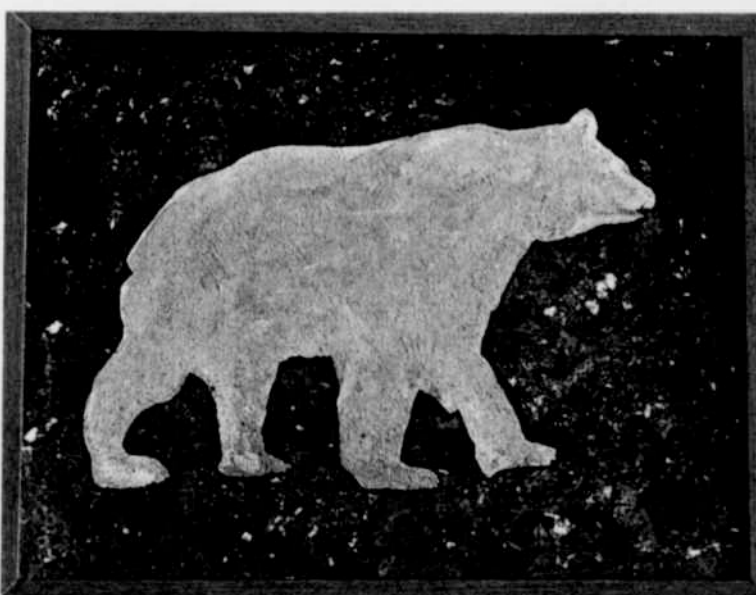

Directed by Leanne Pooley, the 2009 documentary chronicles what are inarguably extraordinary lives. Whether coming out or spearheading anti-nuke activism, protesting apartheid or fighting breast cancer, the Topp twins face their challenges—and mirror a provincial history of causes and culture—with wry humor, tremendous love and a stable of characters that's pegged them "an anarchist variety act."

Rightly so. There are the Ramsbottom socialites, a duo of bowling gals and the beer-swilling, polyester-donning farmers Ken. Jools and Linda's surprisingly nuanced creations are matched by their musical talents. It's easy to understand their (long) standing as Kiwi national treasures—sincere without sap, they change minds and open hearts sans soapbox.

If anything, Pooley's portrait is pleasant to a fault, though it's of little detriment given the doc's irrepressibly optimistic subjects. "On paper, yodeling lesbian twins don't really work," quips one of the Topps' friends. On film, in their native New Zealand and beyond, they not only work, they triumph. The Topp Twins is a feel-good film that feels as true as it gets.

May 20-26, 7 and 9 p.m.; Clinton Street Theater, 2522 SE Clinton St.; $6 adults, $5 students w/I.D., $4 seniors; not rated; 503-238-8899 or clintonstheater.com.
