Pivot and Cascade AIDS Project showcase local photographer's work

After being featured in regional and national publications, exhibiting at Portland's own Q Center and the Qmunity Center in Vancouver, Canada, local photographer Jeffrey Horvitz is the spotlighted artist at Pivot for the month of June.

The San Francisco native, who's currently compiling a series of "Queer Aperture" images for a planned book of the same name, has photographed LGBT athletes—both in and out of uniform—gay community leaders and straight allies.

"Through the Queer Aperture project, I've met all kinds of people who don't define themselves as either all gay or all straight, but rather are all over the spectrum," says Horvitz.

"That's why one of the most important aspects of Queer Aperture is its allies. My straight friends and family, who don't view being gay as out of the norm, [have] made it quite a bit easier to be who I am." ☐

Pivot is located at 209 SW Fourth Ave. Hours are 3-9 p.m. Wed.-Sat.
