

Dancin' In the Streets

Crush celebrates 10th anniversary in block party style BY AMANDA SCHURR

We're no Tim Joyce, but after several consecutive days of sun and summery temps—finally!—we feel fairly safe forecasting that Sunday, August 7, when Buckman neighborhood mainstay Crush celebrates its 10th anniversary, is gonna be the perfect afternoon to dance in the streets.

Which is why our thoughts turn from night(life) to day this time of year—and this day in particular. Folks are invited to mix and mingle, enjoy ice-cold drink specials, a hot barbecue, balloon animals (!

and a soundtrack of sentimental seasonal faves, to benefit the Portland Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence.

Crush owner Woody Clarke promises “drinking in the streets and possibly running through a few sprinklers,” along with a “rocking” sound system, several guest deejays including Mike-

A-Nay, and an outdoor bar and tent. As for attire, Clarke encourages party people to dress how they want, “just make it fun and outdoorsy. Sleazy is good, too.”

From the Girl Crush and Crave dance parties to evenings with the Sisters to simply one of the best happy hours in town, Crush has established itself as an LGBTQ hub for good eats and good times. Where else can you get a perfectly cheese-distributed Nachos for One while talking old-school Kylie Minogue with your patio table neighbor-turned-new best friend?

No wonder our Crush has lasted this long. ☐
