Michkael says he is “about to start engaging the local community and sharing my vision. It’s difficult for people to find a job here. I think Portland is primed for big change. If it can just change focus, we can become one of the most influential cities in the world.”

“Creativity abounds here, but people tend to be really cliquy. This needs to be opened up. When you have a clique, the energy flow gets cut off.”

Baker wants to bring together the Occupy Movement, the black community, the LGBT community, the spiritualists, and the entrepreneurs to help them find common ground.

“I truly desire people to remember who they are; that they are amazing, magnificent beings of light that can do anything when they know who they are. Now more than ever we all need to love each other.”
