

kill you, do not make you stronger. They can lead to cancer, infertility, agonizing pain, psychological trauma, and with complications... death.

Tell her immediately, NS, and brace yourself. I hope you become up front with your sexual health issues, because people need to know before they drink the water.

Last weekend I walked into the men's bathroom at a popular gay bar. I opened the door to find my boyfriend having oral sex with another man. We're supposed to be monogamous, but this is the second time I've caught him in the act of cheating on me. I wanted to go to couples counseling, but he refuses, and says we don't have a problem. I don't know how to fix this, or if it's fixable at all.

- Broken and Confused

When someone breaks your trust, in any fashion, it is very important to figure out if you will ever forgive him or her. There isn't an effective therapy or punishment that doesn't end in forgiveness. BC, if you've had enough, I suggest you end this before it gets more ugly than it already is.

Your boyfriend may be trying very hard to be monogamous, but his resolve was destroyed in a room full of toilets, 50 feet away from you. I'd worry about his ability to resist temptation. Try to have a discussion about capability. Are you capable of forgiveness? Is he capable of commitment? I also think therapy sounds like a great idea. Making a promise in front of a third party can clarify.

BC, this might not be fixable. Only you two can answer that question. Try to decide before you both jump back into the mud.
