

Live Music Ban Discussed Dec. 2

Evaluating the senior play and discussing the matter of having no more live music at school dances were the two major topics of interest at the December 2 student council meeting.

Dave Lohman, the chairman of the Evaluation Committee, presented the opinions of the committee members and then asked for any further comments from the council members. After several opinions were expressed, Dave announced that he would write a summarization of these views that have been expressed and would place the report in the files for future reference.

Another topic of main interest, which was brought up by the members of the council, concerned the recent decision of Mr. Smith's to ban "live" music from all school dances. Several members expressed their feelings on the decision, and asked questions which they felt should be answered. After the long discussions the Student Council delegated a three member committee to talk with Mr. Smith in order to straighten out the confusion which was expressed by the council.

Other business matters were (1) suggesting a better way of choosing the Boy of the Month, (2) announcing the date of the Sadie Hawkins Dance which is January 11, and (3) getting the citizens of the Six Weeks Committee to find more candidates for the next six-week period.

Kathy Tilford Wins Award

Kathy Tilford received the B.P.W. award for her outstanding work at Ashland High School. She was given the pin, which signifies this honor to wear for the next six-week period.

Kathy was named Girl of the Term by the Business and Professional Woman's Club because of the work she has done as the editor of the ROGUE NEWS, as secretary of the Girls League, and as a member of the G.R.A. Executive Board this year. She was advertising manager of the ROGUE NEWS during her junior year as well as the vice-president of the Chess Club. She is also the secretary - treasurer of Quill and Scroll and an active member of the Student Council and Inter-Club Council.

Students Discuss Types of Politics

"This was the best meeting we've had this year. The students really got below the surface in their discussion this time," said Mrs. Peggy Zwick when asked about the Humanities Seminar meeting.

"Does the end justify the means?" was discussed at the recent Humanities Seminar meeting held at the home of Teresa Krug. Different forms of government and leadership were examined and discussed in detail. Jefferson's "First Inaugural Address," Machiavelli's "The Prince," and the Communist Manifesto were read in preparation for the discussion.

Starting the first of the year meetings will be held weekly for a trial period.

Jane Smith Chosen As Correspondent

Jane Smith, a junior at Ashland High School, has been named Co-Ed Correspondent for Ashland High during the 1963-1964 school year, according to an announcement made by Margaret Hauser, editor of the magazine.

Selected for her qualities of leadership and for her enthusiasm for home economics, Jane will serve as junior advisor to the editors of Co-Ed, a national magazine for teen-age girls, and will keep them informed of activities at Ashland High School.

There are more than 3,000 correspondents throughout the United States and Canada; Jane will receive a pin and a card stating her position.

Student Council Picks Yell Queen

Kay Newton, Ashland High's yell queen, was selected Citizen of the Six Weeks by the Student Council for the second six-week period. Kay, who was awarded this honor at the December 16 meeting, has done outstanding work in reorganizing the Pep Club and in fulfilling her position as yell queen.

John Yaple was nominated for his performance in football and for his work as senior class president. Gerald Brown was also nominated as he represented Ashland at the state track meet.

Stanford Official Talks to Seniors

Mr. Richard Huntly, from the registrar's office of Stanford University, spoke to all interested seniors December 9.

He stated that the average grade point for women entering Stanford is 3.92; for men, 3.86. Last year admittance was refused to 200 valedictorians and to 17 National Merit winners. The average Scholastic Aptitude Test score for Stanford students is in the high 600's.

Stanford is rated academically as the second highest university in the United States.

ENGLISH CLASSES VIEW FILM ON HEMINGWAY

By John Purves
A film biography on Ernest Hemingway was presented for Mrs. Selma McAlaster's English III classes last Thursday. Many little known facts about Hemingway were brought out in this film such as the way he described his own youth in his novels about Nick Adams.

Hemingway's later life was always exciting and interesting. An example of his superb action writing was the fascinating way in which he wrote about bull-fights and African hunting expeditions. He lived in Paris at the time of the "Lost Generation" of authors, poets, and artists. In 1923 Hemingway published his first novel.

The film dwelled also on Hemingway, the sportsman. As a boy of three he received his first fishing pole and at ten his first shotgun. In 1933 Hemingway went on his first African safari.

Three Debaters Place In First Tournament

April Lewis, Trudee Lewis, and John Reid took two third places and one second in the first speech tournament of the year which was held at Pacific University at Forest Grove on December 6-7.

John Reid, senior, placed third in the men's division of interpretive reading, although this is John's first tournament, he defeated 67 other students to win this honor.

Trudee Lewis, senior, received third place in the women's division of humorous interpretive reading. Trudee, who is a third-year debater, competed with 60 other students in this division.

April Lewis and Trudee combined forces to defeat 56 teams and capture second place in women's debate. The two Ashland High seniors competed with Hillsboro, Academy of the Holy Child, and Medford in the finals.

According to Mr. Herb Lewis, debate coach, this tournament is one of the most difficult for debaters as there are no divisions for experienced and inexperienced debaters. This means that beginning debaters must compete with students who have had three and four years of debating experience. In addition, this was the first tournament from the Ashland students while many schools have had several warm-up contests.

In addition to the four seniors who placed in the contest, the following Ashland students also competed in the tournament: Charles Moore, Tom Reid, Bob Lawrence, Stan Billings, Gary Gamba, Jan Robinson, Susie Kapteyn, Teresa Krug, Maris Drew, Sami Everett, and Beth Isa.

In January these students will compete in a speech tournament to be held at Southern Oregon College.

Letters to the Editor

Editors note — The following letters were received in regards to a review of the senior class play, written by John Purves, which was printed in the last issue.

AUDIENCE AT FAULT?

Dear Rogue News:

I write concerning your article about the senior class play in the latest Rogue News. Before reading this I was not aware that the newspaper staff harbored a bonafide drama critic.

First, I would like it made clear that I am not a senior and in no way affiliated with the senior play, so this is not a defensive counter—insult but rather an attempt to rally for the cause of the senior play.

Yes, this year's drama was a welcome change from the family comedy.

So Charles Moore was not emotion-clogged? Doesn't the author realize that we were supposed to dislike him, just as we were supposed to like Kathy Herlein, Chris Hoberg, and John Reid?

Say! How about mentioning those supporting roles — not so showy but amply filled by such people as Elaine Delaman, Clyde Nelson, and others.

Has the process of clear logic gone out of style for our Master Critic? He graciously stated that this review covered only the afternoon performance and all shortcomings were corrected in the evening performance. The only difference in the two performances was the audience. This
