Drug In-Service, Held For Teachers

Ashland teachers were given a taste of drug education late this summer. The drug in-service was held August 30 in the afternoon and all day August 31 at Ashland Junior High School The purpose of the program was to give teachers an idea of what drugs are and what kind of drug problem exists in Valley.

Earlier in the year teachers in the district attended a drug workshop in Medford Several Ashiand teachers recommended that a more extensive drug information program be organized. These requests organized. resulted in the in-service held before school.

Mr. Barlow, physics teacher, organized the in-service which teachers were required to attend. Barlow said that he hoped the program would make teachers more aware." He also commented that teachers should now be able " ... to get help for the students ... " involved with drugs.

Speakers at the in-service were chosen to represent all points of view concerning the drug situation. People from the field of law enforcement and the "Open Door" program in in Medford, (a drug crisis center organized to help people with drug-related problems), plus psychologist Dr. Luther and Dr. plus James Post, M.D., both of Medford, were the main speakers at the program

When asked their overall opinion of the drug in-service, the following teachers replied: Mr. Barlow: I thought the teachers appreciated the program

Mr. Vondracek: The program itself was well done. I'm now able to look at it (drugs) more objectively. My impression of the drug problem is now more essimisti

Mr. Wright: The student panel (Open Door) was the best, as it was more informative than the other speakers. They often contradicted each other.

Mr. Smith: It was well done using no scare tactics. We have more indepth programs as the problem gets worse. Many teachers are unaware of a problem to the extent there is in Ashland. Mr. Findlay: It was good and unbiased. There were startling facts.

Mr. Kreisman: The program was boring and gone over, it was mildly informative and and everything was low-key. The feeling was that it isn't a big bad evil monster. Mr. Silver: They did a good job and they knew their business, but it should have been open with more question and answer sessions. Mr. Detweller: Great! It gave the picasurable aspects of drugs as well as harmful. It wasn't filled with fear

Richards To Teach Girls' Physical Education Different And Difficult Experience

Sex is no longer a restriction for prospective teachers in Ashland High School's P.E. Department, Mr. Brian Richards a record this year when set. volunteered and was accepted to teach girl's P.E. He will teach flag football and archery to girls in afternoon classes.

There were several reasons for this break in tradition. Girls' P.E. classes this year had become too large for one teacher to manage and teaching space was limited. It was seen that help was needed. "Someone had to do it and I was available," said Richards, though he realized it would be a "new experience, something different and difficult to handle at first.

To solve the problem of over-crowded classes, some classes will be divided between two teachers. For a period of three weeks one half of the class will learn football from Richards and the other half will go to Miss Kimball for field hockey. Later, the teachers will exchange choses

Students are expected to benefit from this change since Richards is in many ways more qualified than Miss Kimball to teach such subjects as football. Boys will also get the chance to benefit from the experience of a teacher of the opposite sex when Miss Kimball teaches them gymnastics this year.

Girl Obtain Uniforms

gymnastics The girts". coached by Miss Betty Kimball will begin work-outs October 4. The girls will have new warm-up uniforms and leotards for the coming season. Since the budget was cut there will not be any new equipment.

To give more of the girls experience in competition, a junior varsity team will be formed and will compete in some of their own meets.

Miss Kimball believes it will be a "great year" even though Ashiand's all-around gymnast of last year, Etaine Fisher, moved to Portland during the summer. There are many gymnasts returning from last year's successful season and fourth place honor at the district meet.

By the end of the season the will be working for ours every night. The girls two-hours season will last until mid-March.

"Price And Wage Freeze" Problem For All Teachers

President Nixon's decision on the "wage-price freeze" created a serious problem for all teachers. The question was "Do we the teachers receive the promised increase?"

The theory behind the freeze is that people may not receive an increase in salary during the 90 days in which the freeze is in effect. Circumstances in teaching require some interpretation of the law. Some workers sign what is classified as a system-wide contract. This enables all laborers to collect their raises as long as someone was working before the freeze. If one of 5,000 workers worked before the freeze, all may collect the wage increase. Unfortunately, teachers here sign individual contracts allowing themselves to collect the wage increase only if they worked before August 16.

Mr. Stanley Jobe, Superintendent of Schools, commented that he would "....like to see inflation stopped but not at the expense of would ". like to see inflation stopped but not at the expense of one specific group. I also feel that this whole affair has been unorganized and not thoroughly thought through."

President Nixon has made the statement that the 90 day freeze will not be extended past the November 13 expiration date.
