

Convention Nominates McGovern

Over three thousand high school students from across the northwest nominated Senator George S. McGovern as the Democratic Party's Presidential Candidate. Terry Sanford of North Carolina was chosen as McGovern's running mate.

The nominations were the climax of a three-day Model Democratic Convention held in Portland on May 17-19. Thirty-five delegates from Ashland High School were at the convention representing the State of Kansas.

A feature of the convention was Senator McGovern's speech which resumed his campaign after the shooting of Governor George Wallace. In his speech, McGovern called for an end to the violence which has become a part of the American Political Scene.

Active members of the delegation from Ashland include, Paul Tumbleson, State Chairman; Pat Overland, National Humphrey Coordinator; and Larry Taylor, who submitted several planks for the National Platform.

Conducted Like Real Thing
The convention was conducted as much like the national convention as possible. State placards dotted the floor of Memorial Coliseum, where the convention was held. "Spontaneous" demonstrations with band playing and waving posters erupted periodically when candidates names were called.

McGovern's nomination came after five ballots, the last two being very close with presidential hopeful, Hubert H. Humphrey coming in second. A majority of 1509 delegate votes are needed in order to secure the nomination.

The final order of business was the selection of a vice-presidential candidate for McGovern. Such candidates as Fred Harris of Oklahoma and Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin were discussed. Terry Sanford was finally picked on the first ballot.

Delegates also worked on adopting a national Platform. Various planks to the platform, such as ending the Viet Nam War and election reform were debated and adopted by the delegates.

Abacus Pro Shows Skill

Chieki Fujikawa, Chairman of the Abacus Association of America explained the use of the abacus to math students during morning classes Wednesday May 24.

Fujikawa, a native of Japan, and a licensed "Abacus player," demonstrated addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division on the "Japanese pocket computer." He explained that once, in a match against an electronic computer he was able to beat the computer in 40 out of 50 problems.

Starting June 12, Fujikawa will be teaching a class in the use of the abacus on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the Medford YMCA. The class will be offered in Ashland next fall.

French Journal Distributes Its Premier Issue

La Connection, Francaise, selected title of the recently organized Ashland High School French newspaper, distributed its first issue earlier this week in the French classes. The mimeographed magazine-like sheet will be written entirely in French.

The new paper has a student staff, with Mrs. Ida Simon posing as originator and advisor.

Amy McNair and Julie Bingham, both junior French III students this year, were elected editor and assistant editor respectively. Senior Dick Kinney was chosen for the position of cartoonist.

Juniors will continue in their posts next year and senior officers will be replaced in the fall.

To Continue Next Year

According to editor Miss McNair, the journal will be put out every two weeks, beginning next year. The magazine approach, as opposed to a daily newspaper style, will not limit the area of coverage.

"Its purpose is to teach French," commented Miss McNair. She hopes the paper will provide an interesting and understandable alternative or addition to textbook learning.

Graduation

Hatfield To Be Guest

Graduation ceremonies this year will be different from those in the past. The difference comes in the elimination of traditional valedictorian and salutatorian speeches.

The reason for doing away with these speeches, according to senior class president Ray Bartley, is that "too often the many speeches given at graduation have led to a tedious ceremony, making graduation something to be dreaded rather than looked forward to."

Official ceremonies marking the graduation of the class of '72 will begin Sunday, June 4, at 3:00 p.m. with a baccalaureate sermon given by Reverend William Ellis.

Hatfield To Speak
Commencement exercises are scheduled for Thursday, June 8, at 8:00 p.m. on Walter Phillips field. Senator Mark Hatfield will be the guest speaker.

The motto chosen by the senior class is "Ex niblo nihil fit" (Out of nothing nothing comes). Their colors are raspberry red, lemon yellow, and orange orange. The class song is "I'd Like to Teach the World to Sing," and their flower is the carnation.

Junior Victor Zboroski To Spend Summer at School

Junior Victor Zboroski will be doing special research in the biological field of science this summer at New Mexico University. Zboroski is one of twenty United States students who will be participating in this honor class.

Victor applied to three colleges who are sponsoring this type of program. He was selected on his past record and future promise in the field of science.

The class, which will help students collect data and do professional research, begins June 11 and runs for two months. Zboroski believes that this may help him in his ultimate future goal: marine biology or as a "starving artist in Paris."

Federal grants will pay for half of the expenses while Victor stays in New Mexico. They will also pay for his travel expenses going down and coming back.

Vic Zboroski will spend his summer in New Mexico doing special research.
