TRIBUTE TO MOTHERS.

It has been suggested that the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Commercial Club have a day devoted to the mothers of the city and in this connection the following tribute to mothers from the Portland Telegram is well worthy of reproduction and certainly entitled to the consideration of every person:

"Mothers' Day!" We have Christmas Day and Thanksgiving Day and Labor Day and Arbor Day and numerous other days which we observe and celebrate, for one purpose or another. Miss Annie Jarvis, of Philadelphia, urges that another day of universal celebration be added to the list—"Mothers' Day."

The movement was launched some three years ago. The thought originated in the desire of an appreciative daughter to commemorate the anniversary of her mother's death. The wearing of a white flower on the second Sunday in May was suggested as a simple tribute to mothers of the land, living or dead—a tribute that denotes purity. The thought was given publicity, and Miss Jarvis is now earnestly engaged in its further propagation. In this connection, The Telegram is indebted to Miss Jarvis for the following letter:

"Cannot you give Mothers' Day wide and persistent publicity, and urge churches, Sunday schools and all other organizations, military, social, fraternal and civic to observe the day? The mayor of Los Angeles has issued a proclamation; so has the Governor of South Dakota; and West Virginia's Governor also urges all citizens to observe the day. How about the Governor of Oregon, mayor of Oregon cities, etc?"

To urge this new day of special observance is a simple proposition, prompted by the most exalted motive—that of paying proper tribute of love and respect to the motherhood of the world. Once the idea is grasped, it can but gather popularity, for its appeal is to all men to all women and all children. It merely means that the world in its nervous rush of business shall give thought, upon one day in the year as honor to the mothers that are gone, and as a token of love to living mothers.

Upon that day, as the thought is elaborated, the mother at home should be made conscious of the world honor paid to her maternity by such appreciative acts as usually mark the day of special observance, and the mother at a distance should have her heart gladdened by a "love letter," as suggested by Miss Jarvis, or at least by an appropriate greeting of some sort, by wire or mail or phone.

The observance of a day like this makes for the strengthening of the home spirit; and it is a spirit that needs strengthening in this day and age. Simple as it is, it is a movement worthy the official attention of governors and mayors and all manner of societies, and of every individual who honors the memory of a mother dead, or loves a living mother.

UNCLE REMUS' PROPHECY.

Julian Harris, son of Joel Chandler Harris, is now editor of Uncle Remus' Magazine. In the March number he comments on the proposed division of political opinion in his section under the caption "Shall the Solid South Be Shattered?" He says that the "Solid South" is no longer a power, it is a phrase that is a signal for laughter. He frankly believes that the breaking of the "solid South" would be one of the best things politically that could happen to the South, and he lays the foundation for this conclusion. Mr. Harris says that "the South is bound to go slow in any radical move; and President Taft will doubtless be in no hurry. In the meantime, each man of the South can help the nation at large and the South in particular by standing to the gun of his convictions and voting conscientiously and honestly, whether for Republican or Democratic doctrines." What the Uncle Remus Magazine says in such courageous fashion will have influence among its southern readers, and it need create no surprise, when Taft is up for re-election, to see Georgia break away from the solid South and cast her vote for a Republican President.

Booster Spirit Spreading.

Wallace Nash, of Toledo Lincoln county, was a Corvallis visitor Monday and while expressing gratification at the wonderful growth and prosperity everywhere visible to his practiced eye he bubbled over with enthusiasm when speaking of the possibilities of his home county. The boosting spirit seems to have pervaded the air and notwithstanding adverse winds, has at last reached the beautiful little towns along the sea shore. Among other good things, Toledo is going to have a county fair during the 2nd week in September and in the wonderful display of the products of the soil they will be forcibly reminded how pumpkinheaded they have been in wasting golden opportunities. Over $600 has already been raised and the tireless committee is still out in the highways and hedges adding unto the list daily such as may be stung by the magic touch of oratory. That's right brothers! Throw open the doors of your tents and with outstretched arms, cry aloud to the weary passers-by, come unto us ye weary and heavy laden and we will provide a home for you. With two trains daily the golden opportunity is at hand.

At the Missionary Council of the Eighth Missionary Department of the Episcopal Church, in session this week at Spokane, Rt. Rev. Charles Scadding, Bishop of Oregon, has been appointed by the General Board of New York to lead a discussion in the conference on "The Secular Press as a Missionary Agency."
