HIGHEST PRAISE FROM OFFICERS

OAC CADET REGIMENT IS BEST IN ALL THE NORTHWEST

FINEST DRILLED TROOPS HERE

Regular Army Officers Commend the Entire Corp and Say the College Has a Regiment that Cannot Be Excelled by Any Other Body.

OAC has just cause to be proud of its cadet corps, the review, inspection and competitive drills held yesterday having clearly demonstrated that the troops have no superior among all the cadet regiments in the entire northwest.

After the exercises had all been concluded and it was known to whom the awards would be made the GAZETTE secured a personal interview with the United States regular army officers and asked their opinion as to the merits of the corps. Everyone of them was unanimous in saying that in point of personal appearance, knowledge of tactics and perfection in the manual of arms, the cadets of OAC ranked first in all the land. These officers were unstinted in their commendation, saying that privates, non-coms and officers alike in every company deserved the highest praise for their excellent work, which placed the corps in the front rank of all similar bodies of troops. They stated that it had been difficult for them to decide which company in all the battalions was the best and even harder to adjudge the winner when the competition was narrowed down to two, as both were practically perfect.

This praise means much for OAC and it is certainly well deserved. The officers also gave the highest credit to Captain McAlexander for his practical and efficient work with the cadets.

In the final competitive company drill, companies G M B and L ranked in the order named, being then narrowed down to G and M and the Brodie banner at last awarded to Company G, Captain Luce.

Private C. A. French, of Company I; Corporal McAllister, of Company A.; Sergeant Stratton, of Company L., and First Sergeant Williamson, of Company M. won the prizes in the respective drills at the Armory last night and the honors were presented by Captain Martin, First U. S. Infantry, after a few apt remarks by Captain U. G. McAlexander, the Brodie banner being formally turned over to Company G. in a graceful speech by Major General W. E. Finzer, O. N. G.

President Kerr opened the exercises at the Armory with a brief congratulatory address that gave all commendation to the various activities of the college.

Dancing concluded the long and interesting day's program, the military ball being a fitting ending to the gala occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Francis arrived here this morning on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. John F. Allen, Mr. Francis being Mrs. Allen's brother. They have been in Manila for some time, returning from the Islands this spring and going east first to Washington, D. C., before paying this visit to Corvallis.

Miss Emma Sox, of Albany, who has been visiting at the J. M. Nolan home, returned home yesterday.

OLD MAN BENNETT VISITS CORVALLIS

SAGE OF RABBITVILLE TELLS OF HIS IMPRESSION IN USUAL VEIN

SURPRISED AT CITY'S GROWTH

Good Words from the Optimist Editor after Seeing the Remarkable Progress Made Here and Praise for the Oregon Agricultural College.

The Sage of Rabbitville, familiarly known throughout Oregon as "Old Man Bennet," the trenchant editor of The Dalles Optimist, has been to Corvallis, and, in his Rabbitville report he gives his impressions of the city as follows:

Well, I bin down to the little town of Corvallis, but dont you tell ennybody I sed it was a little to wn, for I only sed that for a goak. Corvallis is not only a pritty big place but a nice place and getting nicer evvery day. The first man I met up with was Mister Johnson, the postmaster what runs the postoffice. I asked him how many people there was in Corvallis and he said he thought mebbe about 8,000, but he sed them figurese would not fit the day follering, for the place is growing so fast that he cant keep track of the newcomers. Then I went out to a place they call the camp us, and seen about a thousand
