OLD MEN CROWDED OUT.

The man who has worked all his life on a salary from which he has been unable to save enough to maintain himself without work, and finds himself out of employment at the age of three-score years, naturally discovers the financial outlook for his remaining years depressing, if not hopeless. Though sturdy and in good health, the frost rim of life is upon his brow and chin, telling the story of the years that lie behind him and suggesting a feeling of veneration that no bustling employer along the middle lines of life cares to cherish toward his employers.

Young men are wanted as helpers in business—men who are quick to learn, quick to apply the principles of business to their tasks; men who can be shifted about as the exigencies of business require; who can be brought to book for neglect or carelessness without qualms of pity—men in short, who can do what they are given to do deftly and quickly, without physical overstrain or cause for self-pity.

The commercial spirit is cold and calculating otherwise it would not be able to stand the struggle and competition that open the door of employment to myraids of men and women. It demands the best that is in those who are on its payrolls. The best that the average sexagenarian can give in the way of physical energy and mental alertness is not enough. Herein lies the whole story. The relatively young and vigorous can serve business and industrial interests more satisfactorily than those who have already given the best part of a long life to such service. These facts were never so patent as now. In every department of business and commercial life the pace of the present day is a rapid one. Naturally the man whose energies are more or less weakened by time are not able to keep step with this pace; hence, when they step out for a period of rest, they find it difficult if not impossible, again to get into line. There are laggards whose names are upon the governmental payroll who are allowed to make, to take and to keep their own pace and still retain their places. But governmental indulgence in this line does not extend in private business. If the case is one of faithful and continuous service for a long period of years, the laborer is not infrequently given special consideration, and, while not carried on the actual payroll his name is relegated to a special list with provision for a pension that bears a certain proportion to his salary when in active service.

The man who shifts about, here one year and there the next, is of course cut off from this source of supply. It is he (and his name is legion) who, finding himself out of a job when past middle life and verging upon old age applies for work and is met by the statement—courteous but none the less disheartening—that "only young men are wanted for the work in hand."

Against this degree of industry or business there is no appeal. It seems hard—it is hard—for a man of sixty who feels that he is good for at least ten years of effective labor, to be met by an ultimatum which, if he has nothing that he can do for himself, condemns him to a life of idleness, and which, if he has not saved from his effective years means upon whereby to live, brings him face to face with penury.—Oregonian.

OAK GROVE

FROM EXCHANGES

Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart and family returned Sunday from Sodaville, where they had been for the past few days visiting the former's brother and other acquaintances.

John Wallis has torn down the old barn to build a larger one. The new structure is well under headway and adds much to the general appearance of his neat little country home.

Gus Dodele and his sister Miss Grace, of Wells were among the many who attended religious services conducted by Evangelist Johnson at Albany Sunday.

Mr. Morris, late from Iowa, took advantage of low rates Sunday, and spent the day by the sea at Newport enjoying the magnificent scenery surrounding this beautiful little seaport town.

Mr. Weaver received some severe bruises Friday evening by being kicked by his horse. While removing the harness the animal began kicking with all vengeance, and while in the tantrum struck Mr. Weaver several times. While the wound is quite painful it is not a dangerous one.

Sloper Bros. of Independence, have their well machine planted on the summit of Mt. Dobbins and are going down at the rate of 40 feet a day after pure Adams ale.

A. L. Cooper is now busy hauling wood for C. Collins. This wood, 300 cords in all, was sold to the electric light plant of Albany on contract to be delivered by a certain date, hence the hurry to deliver the goods.
