DESPERATELY PUT TO IT.

Nothing will surpass the tenderness of Mr. Bryan's treatment of the Democrats in Congress who have combined with Republicans to defeat promising opportunities for drastic revision of certain tariff schedules, says the New York Sun. In the House some 40 Democrats bolted an explicit provision of the party platform and by their votes kept lumber from going on the free list. In the Senate 18 Democrats followed suit. Seventeen Democratic Senators likewise voted for a protective duty on iron ore. Yet has Mr. Bryan arisen and denounced these Democrats as "traitors," "embezzlers of power" and other names synonymous of nefarious depravity and degraded abandonment? Not if he knows it. The very harshest thing that he has said about them is that they have made a "mistake," and now he is engaged in what? Well, the latest issue of his proprietary publication discloses him in an act which closely resembles the performance known as juggling with facts, for he says that the Democratic member of Congress who votes against a decrease in a tariff duty "is the exception rather than the rule." The Democratic Senators who voted for the "protected lumber and protected ore were more than half the Democratic strength in the Senate. In the House more than half the Democrats voted, in the only roll calls which put the Democracy on the record there, for protected lumber, hides and bailey.

How Mr. Bryan would have made the moral welkin ring with the thunders of his invective against the Republicans if their party had contained such a large percentage of members who repudiated the party platform and the platform promises! Evidently Mr. Bryan feels desperately put to it to deal with the situation properly, for the upshot of his consideration of it is the conclusion the anyway "our platform was superior" to the Republican platform.

POINTS OF RESEMBLANCE.

A. Maurice Low in an article in the National Review has found several points of resemblance between Mr. Cleveland and President Taft. He describes them as follows: Mr. Cleveland had almost a horror of self-advertising, of notoriety, of doing anything undignified or cheapening the great office which he held. From the standpoint of the flashy, tricky, sensational journal, he was in his own choice vernacular, "a dead 'un." He furnished no sensational news, he called no man a liar and bullied no woman; he saw no necessity of taking the public into his confidence when he ordered a suit of clothes; his views on the latest popular novel he kept to himself as religiously as his private opinion of Senators or Justices of the Supreme Court or Ambassadors. But Mr. Cleveland stuck to the business for which he had been selected and managed to do one or two things noteworthy and lasting—the repeal of the silver law, for instance and the defeat of the silver party—and, living a life of usefulness, so that at his death his people placed him among their great.

Mr. Taft is much the same kind of a man. He isn't "running" the petty politics of half the United States, for he does not believe he was elected President simply to build up a machine for his re-election four years hence. He is going about his work steadily, quietly, but with a definite purpose. He has had to reconcile differences in his party on the tariff, for the tariff is a complicated question, and in a country so vast as this, and where the interests of different sections are antagonistic, it is inevitable that what will be for the advantage of one industry will be to the injury of producer or consumer. In his role as harmonizer and party leader, Mr. Taft has shown that he is both Cleveland and McKinley.

Little Interest Taken In Meet.

The track and field meet scheduled for the Stadium at the A-Y-P Exposition grounds for next Saturday afternoon, and which was declared off when a telegram was received from H. V. Wexler manager of athletics at the Washington State College, Pullman, announcing that no athletes would be sent by Pullman, will be held after all. So much fuss was raised over the decision to call off the meet that it was decided to hold the meet next Saturday, the date originally fixed.

Evidently Manager Wexler acted without the full authority of the officials of the state college for President E. A. Bryan, of the institution, when hearing that the meet was called off, was indignant, and sent a message to Major W. M. Inglis, exposition director of athletics, telling him that unless the meet were held Pullman would claim all the championships by default. The message also contained the information that Manager Wexler had been instructed to make the best financial arrangements with the exposition management he could and send state college athletes to the meet.

It is the first conference college meet of the Northwest, and all of the Big Six were expected to be represented. Oregon is in the midst of final examinations, however and will not send a team. Many of Washington's men have returned to their homes, but have been invited to come back for the events, while OAC may have only a limited number of men entered.
