J. P. Irvine, who 18 years ago was a partner with S. A. Helen in the shoe business in this city, and for a number of years in the grocery business at Minnville, was here this week to witness the graduating of his daughter, Georgia at OAC.

At Saturday's session of the County court the Rose Park addition to Philomath was approved. The road petitioned for in Irish Bend by Bird, Rickard Herron and others was ordered established and the award of $250 made to Chief of Police Wells, his bond having been reduced to $500.

J. R. Cochran, the carrier on Rural Route No. 2, bought a horse recently that was warranted to be very gentle. He hitched the animal up with another Sunday morning to go to Albany, but the critter did not take kindly to the proceeding and began to buck. In a short time the tongue, trees and other forward ends of the rig were scattered around the premises. The family was in the carriage at time, but fortunately no one was hurt. Mr. Cochran thought it best to make the journey with his staid old nag and the new horse has since been loafing in the stable.

Mrs. W. H. Savage Chosen Hostess

The special committee designated by the Commercial Club, acting in connection with the Ladies, Auxiliary and the Benton County Court, have chosen Mrs. W. H. Savage as the official hostess to do the honors for Corvallis and Benton county at the A. Y. P. E. in Seattle upon the day set apart for Corvallis at the fair.

It is not yet definitely known just what date this city and county will have, but it will be some day late in July, it being the intention of Commercial Club to have some of the adjoining counties act with Benton and have one day for all so that a better impression may be made at the fair.

Mrs. Savage will select her own aides to act with her in receiving all who may visit the Oregon building on that particular day.

MAUDE ADAMS AS JOAN OF ARC.

Details of Her Play Planned For Harvard Stadium.

AN AMAZING BATTLE SCENE.

With Lead Soldiers and Model of the Stadium Actress Works Out Evolutions of the Conflict—Thirteen Hundred Persons to Participate.

Ten thousand persons are expected to witness Maude Adams' first appearance as Joan of Arc in the Harvard stadium at Cambridge, Mass., on the evening of June 22. The "bowl" of the stadium will be used for seating purposes, and all that portion of the field that face the "bowl" will be used for the stage. The actors will tread upon turf. A special scenic setting adaptable to the stadium is being built. In the matter of costumes, of which there are more than 1,300, Miss Adams has the co-operation of John Alexander, the artist.

One thousand supernumeraries will be employed by Miss Adams. These will be in charge of fifty super captains, and to dress them there will be a small host of armorers, costume masters, wardrobe masters, etc. Every essential down to a pin necessary for the costuming of this horde will be transported to the stadium. In addition Miss Adams' master electrician will install a complete electrical plant in the stadium sufficient to furnish every requisite of lighting known to the modern theater, only on a scale vastly larger than any hitherto contemplated in America.

The qualities of simplicity and grandeur that mark the Passion play at Oberammergau will also characterize the performance of "Joan of Arc" by Miss Adams and her company. An English version of Schiller's "Jungfrau von Orleans" will be used. The incidental music will be taken in most part from Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony.

To marshal the large force of auxiliaries and to direct the performance there will be employed ten stage managers and a chief manager, and over all these a stage director. The auxiliaries have been separated in groups sufficiently small for individual coaching and drilling, yet large enough to emphasize their relation to the whole. The actors will get their entrance cues by means of signals on varicolored incandescent lamps, and the movements of the mass of supernumeraries will be governed in the same way.

Every afternoon in the library of her New York house Miss Maude Adams resolves herself into a board of strategy, and with a model of the Harvard stadium before her she devotes hours to planning the battle scene in "Joan of Arc" as she will produce the play on June 22. She was busy there the other day with companies and battalions of lead soldiers, cavalry and infantry, moving them about, arranging the entrances and the exits and the various and intricate evolutions that will be followed exactly in the performance. Both the model and the soldiers were made exactly to scale, and the practiced eyes of "General" Adams are able to see just how it will appear when the Harvard stadium, scene of great football battles that are very real, is turned into a mock theater of war as in the days of Joan of Arc.

After Miss Adams closes her season at the Empire theater in New York she will go to Boston with her entire forces—company, stage managers and supernumeraries—for actual rehearsals on the grassy stage of the stadium. Thirteen hundred persons will participate. Three complete rehearsals devoted to actual tactical cavalry maneuvers will be held under the direction of Captain Shelburne of Battery A, Massachusetts volunteer militia, composed of Harvard graduates, who have volunteered for the performance.

The elaborate nature of the production is shown by the fact that the battle scene alone will last nearly half an hour. To give complete verisimilitude its martial tableaux will be copied from paintings by Boutet de Monvel. The scene at the climax will be based on Meissonier's canvas "1807," but with Joan instead of Napoleon mounted upon a white horse amid charging cavalry. The brow of the hill will be on the spectators' left, and Miss Adams as Joan will overlook the conflicting armies on the plain below.

For the perfection of this highly elaborate scene a model of the stadium's stage with its complete settings has been made by John W. Alexander.

The single performance of "Joan of Arc" will be given for the benefit of the Germanic museum and under the auspices of the German department of the university. The use of the stadium was granted some months ago to Miss Adams by the president and fellows of Harvard college.

To Wad Above the Clouds.

Charles J. Glidden, owner of the balloons Boston and Massachusetts, who was recently in Pittsfield, Mass., said that a well known Boston man had made application to the New England Aero club for the use of a balloon in which to be married above the clouds. Mr. Glidden on his return from Indianapolis will arrange for the flight. The balloon will carry minister, bride and bridegroom, a witness and Billy Van Sleet, pilot of the Pittsfield Aero club, who will conduct the ascension.
