PROTECT THE TIMBER.

Importance of the lumber industry as a resource of the state of Oregon, and its value as an employer of labor, are emphasized in circulars, which have been distributed by the Oregon state board of forestry. Accompanying the circulars are copies of the state law enacted in 1907 for the protection of the forests, for the creation of the Forestry board and providing fines for the careless setting of timber fires. The earnest co-operation of all citizens is asked that the loss from these fires may be minimized.

It is pointed out in the circulars that Oregon has 350,000,000 feet of standing timber, worth $475,000,000. If manufactured and sold at present prices, it would bring $5,000,000,000 into the state for labor and supplies. Lumber sales in this state now aggregate $20,000,000 annually, of which $14,000,000 is received by employes who put it into local circulation. About 1,000,000,000 feet of this timber is destroyed by fire in this state annually, which if manufactured would bring $13,000,000. On every 1000 feet burned the stumpage-owner may lose $2, but the community loses $8 in wages.

"Timber means pay checks, but burned timber pays no wages," continues the circular. "Timber pays taxes in your county, if it burns up, your property has to pay the difference. Help keep down forest fires and you will make more money. So will your children. Care with small fires is the best way to prevent big ones."

Officers of the state board of forestry, through Secretary E. P. Sheldon, of Portland, urge the people of the state to observe the following rules:

Don't toss away burning tobacco or matches.
Don't make a campfire in leaves, rotten wood or against logs, where it may spread or you can't be sure it is put out.

Always clear all inflammable material away from around your fire.

Never leave a fire until it is out.

Don't burn your slashings in the closed season without a permit from the fire warden.

Don't operate an engine without a spark-arrester in the closed season.

Put out any fire you find if you can. If you can't, notify a fire warden or other public officer, or the landowner. Remember that any little fire may become a big one if let alone.

REPORTING PROGRESS.

Extraordinary industrial activity, coupled with the purpose and spirit of the new development, is reported from all parts of Oregon. The awakening has been slow; but it is here at last. Everyone notes the effects of the new life throughout the state, says the Oregonian.

The towns and cities are taking pride in their appearance, in the improvement of their streets, in better architecture for the new buildings, and in substitution for buildings of old form and construction, new, modern, tasteful and commodious plans. It is worth not a little to see such towns as Salem and Eugene, Baker City and La Grande at this day, and compare them with the remembered appearance of former times.

Corresponding improvement is noted in the agricultural districts. Irrigation is beginning many a fertile district in the semi-arid parts of the state.

In other parts clearing of new tracts for cultivation is in progress, and better farming generally. Advantages of under-drainage are becoming better known. The study of soils brings its contribution to results. Improvement of livestock is becoming general. Fruit-growing is settling into a scientific system. The timber of Oregon, properly conserved, will forever be a great resource, and transformation of water power into electric power will give the state benefits equal to the labor of millions of hands.

The main drawback now is the slowness of railroad extension. In these times no considerable population will go far beyond the reach of railroad service, and very little real development can come to unoccupied districts till railroads help to open the way. Oregon has a right to be insistent that the great railway combination that almost wholly controls its territory shall continue its activity and open new sections of the state. We shall get the Tillamook road within a year, but we want the Coos Bay road, and, above all, a road into and through Middle Oregon.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The difference between the practical education which is being given in the department of Domestic Science and art at OAC and the superficial training of the accepted finishing schools for young ladies cannot be better illustrated than by the following description of the latter in June Hampton's:

"Finishing" schools are training schools for society, and upon that training they naturally place emphasis. The pupil is forced to shine. Not only at the institutional receptions, but at meals, at play and even in the classroom, she is watched by a competent critic of social behavior, and she succeeds, though she falls behind in her real studies, so long as she does not commit the crime of a failure to "make good" socially.

"You observe that there may well be a broad chasm between what is taught and what is learned. One student of my acquaintance has, after a three years' course, managed to choke down enough French to translate, if there's a dictionary handy, the ordinary Gallic phrases encountered in a popular novel; she knows what a menu is trying to say, though, of course, neither she nor anybody else can translate that verbatim. If she would take time to complete it—but she never takes time to complete anything—she might be able to make a fair copy of a Charles Dana Gibson line drawing. She can recite certain chapters of the Bible by heart, but knows about as much concerning them as the average actor knows about the lines of his part. And as for literature, she has acquired the exact date of every great English writer, his birth and death without having any conception of what any of them wrote, and without swerving one hair's breadth from her allegiance to the contemporary marshmallow school of fiction.

"One mother was rapturously descending to me upon her daughter's social advantages.

"But what," I essayed, "are her intellectual pursuits?"

Madam blinked. "Her intellectual pursuits?" she echoed. "Oh, well she just dotes on music, and she is really a wonderful speller."

"Still some things the girl has gained. The last time she was home I tried to talk to her; we used to make mud pies together, and, later, she chewed the spitballs that I threw at the teacher in the Fourth Reader; but now I am a Mister to her and she is a mystery to me. Well, we talked, or rather she did, and what I received from her was simply a rapid running description of all the season's plays on Broadway. It appears that the school was often taken to the theater in a body, provided the drama to be produced is not too serious, and the whole student body goes as individuals to Saturday's matinees. Consequently the girl has 20 photographs of Robert Edson, each in a different pose on the dressing table, which she used to call a bureau, and knows the private history and matrimonial record of all the idols of the stage."

Women Who Are Envid.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation or kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such, Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood, give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at all druggists.

Excursion to Newport.

On Sunday, June 20, 1909, the Corvallis & Eastern Railroad will run an excursion to Newport, leaving Corvallis about 8:20 a. m., arrive Newport about 12:15 p. m. Leaving Newport at 6 p. m. arrive Corvallis about 10 p. m. Fare will be $1.50 for the round trip. R. C. Linville, Agent. 6-16-4t

Colbert-Howe

A very pretty church wedding occurred at the M. E. Church last evening June 16, at 6:30 when Miss Callie Howe and Mr. Waldo Colbert were united in marriage, by an impressive ring ceremony performed by Rev. D. H. Leech.

Miss Howe was a member of this year's graduating class of OAC. She was a popular student and an earnest worker in church circles.

Mr. Colbert is a popular and well known young man of Corvallis, having been a resident of this place for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Colbert left by automobile for Albany where they took the train for Salem, Portland and Eastern Oregon points.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Davis drove over to their hop ranch at Silverton Monday and will look after business matters there this week.

Tomorrow afternoon at the Commercial Club rooms Mrs. Andrews will act as hostess, the occasion being Ladies' Day. All members are requested to be present.

Miss Bertha Fowles, of Mountandale, is the guest of her aunt, Miss Anna Quick.
