No campfires in state parks

The Oregon Parks and Recreation Department (OPRD) is prohibiting all campfires in Oregon State Parks and other properties owned and managed by the department beginning Aug. 19 at 10 a.m. The ban includes but is not limited to designated fire pits, tiki torches and candles. The ban also extends to fires on ocean beaches.

Said MG Devereux, OPRD Deputy Director,

"An unintentional fire in a state park would add an unnecessary burden to fire fighting efforts."

The state park ban doesn't apply to propane stoves and/or charcoal briquettes for cooking, but there may be local fire restrictions that do limit them. Visitors planning a trip should check with park staff for the most current information.
