Burnt River flashflood

Photos courtesy of Pamela Haney

A wall of water came down in the Burnt River Canyon area on May 5 after widespread thunder and lightning storms swept across northeast Oregon. Reports were of one logging camp hit up Dark Canyon with no serious damage or injuries. Photos of Dark Canyon and French Gulch show the mud and debris, which were cleared off the next day. Without the trees and other plant life formerly up Dark Canyon prior to last year's devastating Cornet/Windy Ridge Fire, erosion and flashflood situations are expected to be continued problems in such areas.
