While Robert worked for Georgia Pacific in Eugene as a plywood plant supervisor in 1983, he and Jean had learned that Lester passed away, and, since Jean was in line to inherit the property, Robert had to make a decision—to stay in Eugene or to move to eastern Oregon. “It’s a decision we didn’t regret at any time...” Robert said.

The Pondosa Store still remains in operation, from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., five days a week, Robert said, and it’s well-stocked now. Inventory includes pop, candy, ice cream, and staple items (no cigarettes, or liquor, he said). He said he’s currently looking for someone to take over management of the store.

Robert participated in his first “Honor Flight” last week from Portland, to, among other sites, the National World War II Memorial, in Washington, D.C. He made the flight with 19 other veterans, from different branches of service (he said he was the only marine). “We had a great time, visiting all the memorials in Washington, D.C. This is something I’ve finally accomplished,” he said. Honor Flight is a non-profit organization, dedicated to providing veterans with honor, and closure, according to the Honor Flight Network. Its mission: to transport America’s veterans to Washington, D.C., to visit those memorials dedicated to honor the service, and sacrifices of themselves, and their friends.

“I was the only World War II veteran (of the group of 20) that didn’t need a wheelchair,” Robert said, jokingly. He visited the sites with his granddaughter, Lindsay Williams, and he met and shook hands with Oregon’s Representative Greg Walden at the World War II Memorial, which he said is a “fantastic place.” Robert said Walden presented each veteran with a flag, an Honor Flag, which had flown over the Capitol building, in Washington, D.C. This included certification of that fact, and each veteran was named and entered into the Congressional Record.

“It was really spectacular, precision work,” Robert said, of the special presentation the Marine Corps drill team made, while he was visiting the Marine Corps War Memorial, which depicts the raising of the American flag on Iwo Jima.

Upon his return to the Portland airport, Robert said, the warm reception was amazing, the event filmed, and his interview broadcast by a local TV station. “It was a great experience for me...I felt gratified,” Robert said. Gratitude is humbly extended from this reporter and veteran, to Sergeant Robert Bennett, members of the Greatest Generation, and others, whose sacrifices allowed us the freedom in which to live our modern life.
