Armbruster stated his intent to post a statement from FAFA regarding denial for request of information, what's going on, and "how it affects you."

He said the USFS has denied absolutely people from getting information about what they have done, are doing, and are planning to do.

He stated Montana, Utah, Idaho, California, and western Oregon have all had negative repercussions. "If we're not out there raising hell, this will just go through," he said.

Armbruster stated it's getting to the point it appears there will be a legal battle.

Meetings are being held in five locations in June and July to educate folks on all that's going on and to try and communicate what the Forest Service is doing.

They are planning to train people on how to write letters of opposition.

Armbruster stated he is not against local USFS employees.

"It's the bureaucratic and politics from some folks back east that can't spell tree."

He shared his hope that if people persevere, they can win.

Clarke stated, "They are trying to wear us down."

There are fewer and fewer participants in opposition.

Thompson shared that she was told the Forest Service was trying to restrict or stop the annual archery club shoot at Anthony Lakes this year.

Young stated that the USFS resiliency program will mean a lot more forest burning and controlled fires to knock down duff underneath.

He said he got himself in some trouble by suggesting they start near cities and burn away to create fire breaks and saying every trail they leave open creates another fire break.

Public input

Groundskeeper Dick Brown reported checking in with the pest control representative that afternoon.

He said it rained a day or two after she put the poison out for the ground squirrels at the Grounds. Rain neutralizes the product, and it's hard to tell what kind of kill they got.

Brown will apply the poison again in a few days after the threat of rain passes.

The poison is put down into the holes and dirt kicked over it. There is none on the surface, but domestic animals should be kept away.

Brown said he will have to fill most of the bigger holes by hand as the harrow is not going to do it.

Thompson said the Bag Ladies would like to do something in memory of Ona Smith.

They would like to put in a new heating system at the Schoolhouse.

Thompson said Smith "always wanted to be warm" and she mentioned doing this before she passed. They will need the City to call someone who does heating to come out and see if the duct system is sufficient to put in a new furnace.

Clarke said he will talk to City Recorder Julie McKinney to find out who they use.

Young stated that the Snowmobile Club every year offers $400 for the use of the Schoolhouse or offers a project to benefit the City.

Last year they provided a covering over the Schoolhouse entrance, which he thought was pretty good timing considering all the snow.

This year, they would like to donate $750 for materials for "preservation, reconstruction, and tightening up" of the building called the Birdhouse or Hub at the Grounds. Sumpter Valley Community Volunteers voted to match up to $750.

Labor would be volunteer. Young suggested that the building may be useful if local restaurants can't handle the anticipated crowds during the eclipse.

He could fire up the grill and provide hot dogs or something to give people another in-town option. Council agreed to give project the go-ahead.
