Daylight savings ends

Daylight saving time ends on the first Sunday in November – this Sunday, Nov. 5 – when clocks are moved back an hour at 2 a.m. local time (so they will then read 1 a.m. local standard time).

What does this mean for travelers? It means potential disruption to sleep patterns which can result in drowsy, inattentive driving. Just last year in Oregon, 15 people died in crashes involving drowsy driving, up from nine in 2015, a 67 percent increase. It's likely that number is even higher, as officials often don't know if drowsy driving contributed to a crash.

Over the past five years in the state, 51 people died in crashes where drowsy driving was a factor: most likely, those crashes could have been avoided.

Drivers must use extra vigilance this time of year not only to avoid driving drowsy but to watch out for others because our days are shorter – people on bikes and on foot will be traveling in dusk and darkness, both in the mornings and evenings.

TIP: Drivers should allow plenty of time to get where they need to go, so they aren't in a hurry, and be prepared to slow down.

TIP: Pedestrians and bicyclists should wear bright and/or reflective clothing, use reflective gear and lights, and watch out for drivers who may not see you.

Man pleads guilty to sex abuse

On October 30, 2017, Cecil Ray Noble (dob 02-16-1947) of 29073 Rye Valley Ln, Huntington, Oregon pled guilty to two counts of Sexual Abuse in the First Degree and one count of Public Indecency. Noble was sentenced to 75 months with the Oregon Department of Corrections with 45 months post-prison supervision. Because Sexual Abuse in the First Degree is a Ballot Measure Eleven crime he will not be eligible for good time.

Noble was charged with touching two underage girls on the buttocks in the Huntington park on March 10, 2017. The two 75 month sentences were run concurrent.

Noble also received an executed sentence on the public indecency charge. Noble will be required to complete sex offender treatment and register as a sex offender as part of 45 months post-prison supervision.

That state agreed to run the sexual abuse charges concurrent so that the victims would not have to testify at trial which was important to their parents. The victims' families were very pleased with the result of the case.
