EXCHANGES

Roseburg high has been conducting a campaign to beautify the high school grounds. Shrubs have been planted and a great improvement has been made. Various organizations and clubs of the town have donated money and the different classes and faculty have raised funds.

This is a good idea for us to adopt. Since our back yard has been cleaned up, suppose we add some more improvement to the front. Plant some shrubbery and clean up the space around our new gym.

The U-Hi from Union Oregon publishes some answers to examination questions taken from the Arrow Head, Flint, Michigan. Some of them are too good to miss.

Georgia was settled by people who had be executed.

In 1620 the Pilgrims crossed the ocean. This is known as Pilgrims Progress.

Resourceful Girl Who "Parked" Her Sleeves

I am not going to reveal her identity more than to say that her name is Margaret, and she lives in Hamburg, but I will say that on a certain occasion this young woman showed herself possessed of resourcefulness.

When she dressed for that reception, or whatever it was, she did not know that it was going to be a formal affair, so she put on a dress or a gown or a frock or—gee, being a man is something awful when it comes to writing about women's clothes. Guess I better call it a dress. She put on a dress with long sleeves.

When she got to the place where the reception or whatever it was, was going on, she discovered that every other woman there had on a sleeveless gown. I guess gown is right. But did she let that spoil the occasion for her? Not this young woman. Not by a long shot. She slipped upstairs, slipped into a room, slipped off her dress, ripped out its sleeves, slipped the "gown" on again and slipped downstairs in less time than it takes to tell it.

Approaching her hostess she said: "Tell me, please, where I can park these sleeves."—Buffalo News.

She (reading)—Here's a man who was given 30 days for stealing a gold watch.

He—That's an easy penalty. I stole a heart once and was given life.

Una H. "It seems good to see a strange face once in a while."

He. "But surely you know me?"

Una. "Yes, but that doesn't change your face any."

Father of Herbert H. "Yes, my son is destined to be a great scientist. I presume you have noticed his way of going to the bottom of things?"

Prof.—"Yes, I've noticed it in his classes."
