The main feature of the program was the presentation of a number by the whistling chorus, a group of trained vocalists. The members were introduced personally by the student body president, Harold Ness. He explained that each one had been selected by a policeman on duty in the halls as a result of his proven ability as a whistler. It has since been reliably reported that whistling is on the decline.

Due to the inability of Mary MacLean to act, the singing was led by Peggy Redhead.
