Five Instruments Gone From School

On Thursday, March 18, late at night, the music room of West Linn high school was rifled of six instruments. Three were owned by the school and two privately owned. School instruments stolen were a tenor sax, a clarinet and a piccolo; the privately owned were an alto sax, belonging to Vivian Clifford, and an alto sax to Bernice Webber. School owned instruments were covered by insurance, also the alto sax belonging to Bernice Webber.

The burglars climbed to the low roof beside the auditorium stairs and broke a window on the west side of the music room, but the window was nailed shut. Being foiled there, they climbed to the upper roof and went down the skylight, leading to the supply room of the band. Fingerprints and foot prints were left.

The serial numbers on all the instruments are on hand. Reward is offered for instruments and also for information leading to arrest and conviction of the thieves. The instruments were valued at between $500 and $600.
