ILWU turns out for May Day rally

Locked-out members of International Longshore and Warehouse Union make up the largest contingent from organized labor at Portland's May Day march and rally May 1. The event drew a diverse crowd of several hundred participants, with a prominent showing from immigrant workers and members of the Industrial Workers of the World. Other unions sporting banners were Amalgamated Transit Union Local 757 and Iron Workers Local 29. The mix is well in keeping with the origins of the celebration, which is observed around the world as International Workers Day. May Day was chosen to commemorate a rally in Chicago's Haymarket Square that took place during an 1886 general strike for the eight-hour day. Chicago police had killed several Irish immigrant strikers, and were attempting to break up the rally organized by anarchist trade union leaders when a bomb was thrown at police and they opened fire on demonstrators. Though today bullets are rarely used on demonstrators in the United States, Portland's May Day events have sometimes seen arrests and tensions with police. This year, ILWU members rattled the police when they broke away from the permitted march route and briefly occupied an entryway to Wells Fargo tower, where United Grain is headquartered. ILWU is in a labor dispute with United Grain, and members have been locked out of its Vancouver grain terminal since Feb. 27, 2013.

Morrow
Pacific
project

A pathway to jobs. An investment in rural counties.

The Morrow Pacific project will create more than 2,100 construction jobs and more than 1,000 operations jobs.

Working together.

At Morrow Pacific, we have designed and proposed a coal export project that meets Oregon's high environmental standards. Already, we have three DEQ permits in hand. The project will also create thousands of jobs.

Morrow Pacific and the Building Trades Council have an agreement to work together to build this project. Your construction skills and your grassroots support are both essential to success. We look forward to starting work, together, just as soon as we can.

All of us need to join together now to push back against those who are opposed to new industrial projects that create family-wage jobs and generate local revenue. You can help. Please visit www.morrowpacific.com or call 503-552-5009 to add your name to the list of those who value jobs and the economy. Your support will make a difference. ■
