Northwest contingent forming for Chicago Labor Notes conference

Local labor union activists are recruiting a contingent of unionists from the Pacific Northwest to attend the April 1-3 Labor Notes conference in Chicago.

The conference takes place every two years, organized by the nonprofit group Labor Notes. The group's mission is to "put the movement back in the labor movement," and the conference will include over 100 workshops and discussions about topics like how to combat union member apathy, how to win union contract campaigns, how to prepare for and win a strike, and how to get a better understanding of the economy.

Over 2,000 people attended the conference two years ago, including 75 union members from Oregon and Southwest Washington.

Shamus Cooke, a union steward with Service Employees Local 503, says the goal this year is to go to Chicago with 100 union members from the local area.

Conference registration is $105 until Feb. 15, and $150 after that.

For more information, visit <http://www.labornotes.org/conference> or contact local Labor Notes organizer Johanna Brenner at 503-234-2306.
