WARREN, Mich.— Adding another specific to her economic platform, Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton told a crowd of workers in Warren, Mich., that she would appoint a special “chief trade prosecutor” to pursue foreign violators of trade pacts.

She also reiterated her strong opposition to the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP), the controversial so-called “free trade” pact backed by big business, most Republicans, and some Democrats, including her former boss, President Barack Obama.

The TPP is pending in Congress.

Clinton told the crowd in Warren on Aug. 11 that the TPP is like other deals that take advantage of U.S. workers. Such trade pacts don’t live up to their advocates’ promises, she said. She vowed to oppose all of them.

“My answer is to make trade work for us and not against us,”

“My answer is to make trade work for us and not against us. So my message to every worker ... across America is this: I will stop any trade deal that kills jobs or holds down wages, including the Trans-Pacific Partnership. I oppose it now, I will oppose it after the election, and I’ll oppose it as president.”
