Labor history group puts out call for papers

2019 marks the 100th anniversary of a watershed year in American and Canadian labor history, especially in the West. The year was defined by the Seattle and Winnipeg General Strikes, the Centralia Massacre, and a wave of state-sponsored repression of immigrant workers during the Palmer Raids. The Pacific Northwest Labor History Association will reflect on those events at its annual conference in Portland May 3-5.

PNLHA has put out a call for papers, presentations, performances and workshops that examine labor history of the past 100 years, especially related to: labor radicalism;

House Democrats plan to restore 'Labor' to the name of the labor committee

WASHINGTON, D.C. (PAI) — The House Education and Labor Committee is back. To nobody's great surprise, the House Democratic Caucus, whose members will be the majority in the 116th Congress, voted to restore the word "Labor" to the name of the committee that deals with workers' rights, job safety and other related issues.

That continues the 25-year back-and-forth between the two parties over the panel's name. After winning in 1994, the GOP, hating the word "Labor," changed the name to "Education and the Workforce." When Democrats retook House control in the 2006 election, "Labor" rebounded. And when the GOP seized power four years after that, "Workforce" returned. Now "Labor" is back in the House.

The name changes symbolize continuing high partisanship on the panel. Democrats voted in Rep. Bobby Scott (D-Va.), now ranking member, as chairman. Republicans named current chair Rep. Virginia Foxx (R-N.C.) as ranking member. She questions the need for unions at all.
