Law for the workers

About 250 union staff, stewards, and officers attended the 2019 Oregon Labor Law Conference Jan. 25, and heard from Working Partnerships USA executive director Derecka Mehrens about an incredible series of victories a union-community coalition has won in Silicon Valley, one of the most unequal places in America. Since 2013, they've won a $15 an hour minimum wage in eight cities, and ordinances giving more hours to part-time workers and more job security to service workers. For Mehrens it was also a homecoming: Her father, uncle, and cousins are members of Tualatin-based Plumbers and Fitters Local 290.

In honor of Oregon Labor Law Conference founder Norm Malbin, IBEW attorney Diana Winther presented a big $5,000 check to Michael Dale, director of Northwest Workers Justice Project, a legal non-profit that helps low-income workers who are wronged by their employers.

Trust and experience make a strong union

Administering labor management funds is a complex process. At Union Bank®, we have made it more efficient for Taft-Hartley clients for over 60 years.
