

WASHINGTON

FEDERAL OFFICE

Congressional District 3

Carolyn Long (D) a political science professor at WSU Vancouver, got 47% of the vote two years ago in her challenge to Republican incumbent Jaime Herrera Beutler. Turnout will be much greater in this election, and supporters think she has a good chance of winning. Herrera

Beutler's votes over five terms in office have earned her a 21% lifetime rating from the AFL-CIO. This year she voted against the PRO Act, a far-reaching bill that would make it easier for workers to unionize and get a first contract free from employer intimidation. STATEWIDE OFFICE

Governor

Jay Inslee (D) was once disinvented to speak at the Washington AFL-CIO convention after defying labor to give Boeing a record-breaking no-strings-attached $8.7 billion tax break. But he's also signed dozens of pro-labor bills expanding collective bargaining, the prevailing wage, and infrastructure investment. AFL-CIO, AFSCME JayInslee.com

Lieutenant Governor

Two Democrats got the most votes in Washington's "top two" primary so voters decide between them. Both are considered pro-labor, and the Washington State Labor Council has endorsed both.

Marko Liias (D) is a state senator from Everett with a strong pro-labor voting record. MarkoForWA.com

Denny Heck (D), a sitting Congressman with a 93% pro-labor voting record, was a late entry into the race. IBEW 48 DennyHeck.com
