Washington State Labor Council releases state lawmaker ratings

When it comes to the voting records of Washington state legislators, Southwest Washington has some of the most pro-worker—and anti-worker—in the state, at least as tallied by the Washington State Labor Council, AFL-CIO. WSLC coordinates political and legislative action at the state level for more than 600 affiliated local unions representing approximately 500,000 rank-and-file union members, and every year, it issues a report tracking how lawmakers voted on issues that matter to working people. WSLC's 2021 report scored lawmakers for their votes on 19 bills.

UNIONIZATION → MAY-JUNE 2021

The following are Oregon and Southwest Washington workplaces where workers have decided whether to be represented by a union. The thumbs-up symbol means workers will be union-represented. Thumbs-down means they'll be on their own. "Decert" means union-represented workers voted whether to remain union. The information comes from the National Labor Relations Board and the Oregon Employment Relations Board.
