

VERNONIANS: Pass the Bond, Not the Buck!

The Vernonia School District 47J Board of Directors has passed a resolution to place a bond measure on the November 3 election ballot. The bond will be for $13 million dollars and will be used to purchase property and build new schools in a safe and insurable area of the community. From June to November the Vernonia School Bond Committee is bringing you information monthly to help you in your decision to support a YES vote in November--a Yes vote for our children and grandchildren and for the future and prosperity of our entire community.

This month our interview is with Dr. Phyllis Gilmore, who runs our local Providence Medical Clinic, and has years of experience working in small rural communities.

Question: Do you think schools are an important part of rural communities, and what role do you think our schools play in our community?

Answer: Schools and churches are the cornerstones of small communities. The strength of those cornerstones very often determines what type of community will be built over, under, and around them.

We are blessed to have several churches and many strong church leaders in Vernonia. Our American freedom of religion gives us the opportunity to worship and grow in our spiritual lives in ways that follow our individual beliefs. Our Vernonia church cornerstone in some ways is even stronger than before the floods in that they helped shelter our hurting hearts and souls and we were reminded of the strength that comes in pooling our prayers and faith.

The school is the cornerstone where children and their families of all belief systems, all economic and educational levels come together to grow in the realm of education where we train our children to find their way in the world of employment, the arts and physical fitness. THAT part of the cornerstone, however, was weakened and remains vulnerable.

Question: Why do you think it's important that we move our schools campus to a safe location?

Answer: When waters and winds come, people gather to safe haven. We need our school, our clinic, and our city government buildings available for the tax payers who built them to be able to use them when their own homes are threatened. Stewardship of our money means our schools are open to us when we need them.

Question: What would you say to someone who says we can't afford new schools in this community and in this current economy?

Answer: I probably have as good an opportunity as anyone in this town to see what the flood, the current economy, and future concerns are doing to people and families. Lost jobs and homes become depression, lost marriages, substance abuse. BUT re-building, even though it costs that pound of flesh, is the only way to have a chance to go UP and OUT of where we are.

Question: How do you think a new school campus would impact student learning and the school districts ability to recruit faculty?

Answer: My mother was a school teacher for forty-one years. I remember how excited she got if our school got a new teacher, a new piece of equipment, a new set of books. GOOD teachers keep learning, and if we offer a teaching environment of growth and challenge, the good teachers will come. And, you show me a good, interested, excited teacher, and I will show you a child who learns.

Question: What do you think will happen to our schools and our community if we don't pass this bond?

Answer: If we don't pass the bond, then we have passed what opportunity we have in front of us to once again rebound, sustain, and grow. We all know we need money from the outside to help complete this mission. But, if the grant-givers and the bill-passers don't see our money on the table, they won't put down any of theirs. PLEASE VOTE YES FOR VERNONIA SCHOOLS!

From Summer Days To School Days

By Brandi Fosdick

Summer's over. (Sigh). No more driving by Hawkins and seeing it full of smiling, laughing kids. Instead, they'll be solemnly sitting in school, most of them anyway, daydreaming about the past three months... images of fireworks and watermelons and barbecues running through their minds. Right this minute, someone's mouth is watering at the memory of walking around at Jamboree while eating a sugar-smothered elephant ear.

Speaking of Jamboree, it was a great success, from new booths to a parade that lasted over an hour without pausing for five minutes every block. Our small but mighty car show saw not only a lot of newcomers, but also some long standing traditions like the "The Pink Lady" and "Betty Boop" cars. While admiring everyone's rides, there were two excellent bands jamming in the background. Locals and tourists could also see more novelty events such as the lawn mower races, the black powder rendezvous up on Stoney Point, and the Logging Show. Later Saturday night, the parents and younger siblings could enjoy a concert and fireworks while the teens went to a dance. Originally, the dance was set to be in the gym, but had to be moved to the cafeteria. No one seemed to mind, though. About the only comment anyone had was that it was two dollars cheaper and that that was great with them.

Their very unusually optimistic outlook (think about it, when is anyone between 12 and 20 ever optimistic?) got dampened a little as they dragged their feet and backpacks to yet another school year in mods. I mean, they are better than nothing. But still, they're cramped, stuffy, and the students still have no lockers. While they are pretty well adjusted to their new environment after a year and a half, they would really like to see new schools built before they can't remember what a real school is like. You know, the kind of school with lockers, a full-size library, and real home-ec and art rooms. But well, what the hey, everyone will survive as usual. Hopefully, the snow won't attack the students in between classes quite so much this year, though. If you're so inclined, a prayer or two for them couldn't hurt.
