

Writing to Create Ourselves

Celebrating National Poetry Month with Oregon Poet Laureate Emerita Paulann Petersen

We write to create ourselves, to discover---moment to moment to moment---who we are, who we are becoming.

Join Oregon Poet Laureate Emerita Paulann Petersen in a writing workshop dedicated to generating new work. Using her springboard method, you'll turn yourself loose in the river of words, letting language carry you along in its current. This workshop will not be genre-specific. What participants write may turn out to be memoir or poetic prose or poems or fiction. Paulann's goal is to have each participant leave the workshop with a trove of new material. All levels of experience are welcome. This is a workshop for beginners and experienced writers alike.

This workshop is free but pre-registration at the library is required. Please bring a journal or notebook and pen or pencil. Because Paulann expects each participant to do considerable writing, she urges you to bring a reasonably large notebook or journal.

Paulann will give a reading in the library beginning at 6:00 pm. Light refreshments will be served at both the workshop and reading. Contact the library (503) 429-1818 or library@vernonia-or.gov with questions or to register for the workshop.

Sunday, April 10 at the Vernonia Public Library
Workshop: 12:30 – 4:30 pm (Registration required)
Reading: 6 – 7:30 pm (No registration, open to the public)

Where Do You Read the Voice?

Cherie Peck provided a new twist by reading the Voice on her tablet during a recent trip to the Google campus in San Jose, CA.

Would the minority please chill out.

Yes your weed is legal, but we're still a small family town that doesn't want to be defined by your right to smoke it.

Your arguments against cannabis are clearly lacking. Learn to craft solid arguments based on fact and people will take you seriously.
