Not Dead Enough— A Cal Claxton Oregon Mystery
In 1957, Nelson Queah watched as the sacred falls at Celilo slowly disappeared with the closing of the flood gates of The Dalles Dam on the Columbia River. War hero, Wasco Indian and passionate opponent of the dam's construction, Queah stood by helplessly as ten thousand years of tribal history and fishing tradition were erased in four hours. That night Nelson Queah vanished without a trace.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Vernonia Public Library.
