

Columbia Pacific CCO Hosts Community Meeting

Columbia Pacific CCO's Community Advisory Council would like to invite you to their annual community presentation: Using Data to Understand Community Health Improvement on Monday, April 10, 2017 from 3:30-5:00 pm at Sunset Park Community Church, 174 Sunset Blvd., St. Helens.

The presenter, Ari Wagner, health data analyst, will show us how data comes to life in an entertaining and meaningful way. This community conversation is for all interested individuals in Columbia County.

Register for the event at <https://www.eventbrite.com/e/health-priorities-annual-update-for-columbia-county-tickets-32931449853> or contact Karen at: knudsonk@careoregon.org.

strategic objectives.

"Pathways management is a collaborative approach to invasive species management that leverages limited funding, works across jurisdictional boundaries and supports science-based decision making to protect Oregon," said Jalene Littlejohn, OISC Lead Coordinator.

About the Oregon Invasive Species Council

The OISC is a group of representatives from state and public agencies, scientists, educators and members of the public who lead Oregon's fight against the threat of invasive plants and animals. They collaborate with a wide group of people to spearhead initiatives to increase citizen understanding and involvement in protecting the state against the harms of invasive species.

The council was created by the Oregon Legislature in 2001 and receives funding through a variety of state, federal and private donations. Those interested in joining the council or learning more about how to get involved are encouraged to contact the coordinator at coordinator@oregoninvasivespecies-council.org.
