OREGON NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST

Principal Events of the Week Briefly Sketched for Information of Our Readers.

Boiler inspectors of Oregon will hold a conference in Portland Saturday, January 28.

A total of 7291 lineal feet of cement sidewalk was laid in Cottage Grove during 1921.

Fire losses in Oregon, exclusive of Portland, during the month of December, aggregated $138,999.

Receipts of the Albany postoffice for the last month were 11 per cent greater than during December, 1920.

Fines collected in the nine justice courts in Clackamas county during 1921 nearly trebled those for 1920.

Announcement was made by the war finance corporation of a loan of $135,000 for agricultural and livestock purposes in Oregon.

Records at the Gaston postoffice show an increase of 25 per cent in the Christmas mail handled in 1921 over that of 1920.

Four hacksaws were found hidden in the Lane county jail recently by Sheriff Stickels and his deputies, who were overhauling the place.

Sheriff W. J. Wilson of Clackamas county was cleared of the indictment of larceny by bailie, returned against him by the grand jury on December 22.

Interest displayed by ex-services men at a meeting of the American Legion assured the organization of a company of infantry of national guards at Hood River.

Because heavily loaded trucks are cutting up certain county roads badly, the Lane county court has issued an order limiting the weight of loads they carry.

Organization of Linn county's first drainage district will be completed soon. This project is to drain a section of land a short distance east of Albany.

A move is on foot to establish the biggest brickyard in the state, one mile west of Jacksonville, which will provide employment for a large number of men.

Portland's postal receipts were $10,200 larger in December, 1921, than in December of the preceding year. Portland was the 29th city in December postal receipts.

George C. Munger, 76, pioneer resident of Oregon, is dead at The Dalles after a short illness from pneumonia. Munger was chief of The Dalles fire department in 1891.

During the year 1921 the city recorder of Pendleton issued building permits of a total valuation of $466,000. In 1920 the value of new buildings erected was $318,000.

More than 1000 members of the Christian Endeavor society are expected to attend the state convention of the organization, which will be held in Salem, February 16 to 19.

Heart disease, developing from a moderate cold of two weeks' duration, caused the sudden and unexpected death at Portland of Miss Frances Holman, 79, pioneer resident of Oregon.

A complete investigation of charges and counter-charges concerning the management of the Oregon institution for the blind will be made by a committee of prominent Portland people appointed by Governor Olcott.

Senator Stanfield has introduced a bill appropriating $30,000 for improving the entrance to Oregon caves in Josephine county and providing proper lighting facilities to make this scenic spot more inviting to tourists.

On January 16 the Union county court will open bids for $400,000 road bonds. The bonds represent the maximum amount of road bonds issuable annually by the county court under the road bond election held last year.

Teachers in the Salem schools, under a decision announced by the board of directors, will be allowed eight-day absences on pay when the absence is caused by illness, or attendance at funerals in event of death of an immediate relative.

The special election set for January 31 by the Klamath county court to vote on a road bond issue of $800,000 has been called off because Clark, Kendall & Co., Portland bond house, discovered a legal error in the petition which rendered it invalid.

A total of $53,355.51 has been expended for land, buildings, equipment, operation and administrative costs by the Oregon land settlement commission since its creation through an act of the 1919 legislature, according to a report filed with Governor Olcott.

Representative Hawley and J. H. Naiper of Reedsport, counsel for the port of Umpqua, appeared before the house rivers and harbors committee in Washington, D. C., and asked the committee to approve the project for the north jetty at the mouth of the Umpqua river as recommended by the board of army engineers. The engineers' estimate of the cost was $267,000.

The Santiam Reclamation company has filed an application with the state engineer for the appropriation of 1500 acre-feet of water from the North Santiam river for power purposes. It is proposed to develop the power near Stayton, according to the application.

T. A. Raffety, chief inspector for the state motor vehicle department, has announced that he will soon appoint eight additional traffic officers, under a new law enacted at the recent special session of the legislature. This will give the department 15 field men.

It has been announced that the late Colonel H. H. Sargent, widely known army officer and prominent Medford and Jacksonville citizen, in his will bequeathed 167 volumes of essays, letters, books of biography, travel and high-class fiction to the public library of Medford.

There were two fatalities in Oregon due to industrial accidents during the week ending January 12, according to a report prepared by the state industrial accident commission. The victims were William Peters, planer, Portland, and Edward Erickson, dock employe, Astoria.

As a result of the opinion of the Oregon supreme court upholding the constitutionality of the state dog tax law, canine owners in counties not exempted under the act will be compelled to pay their licenses within 30 days under the penalty of having the animals destroyed.

A decision to purchase a farm of 245 acres to be used as a Women's Christian Temperance Union home for dependent children was reached at a meeting of the child farm board of the organization in Corvallis. The tract is three miles east of Corvallis on the highway leading to Albany.

Irrigation of 3395 acres of land, construction of 90 miles of canal lines and the development of 7156 horsepower are contemplated in 91 permits to appropriate water and eight permits to store water issued by Percy Cupper, state engineer, during the months of October, November and December.

Citizen Indians will meet at Beatty January 20 and at Chiloquin January 23 to determine whether a request shall be made or a suit instituted in the United States court of claims for a partition of the Klamath Indian reservation, or for an apportionment of the shares of the individual Indians who have become citizens of the United States.

The Willamette Valley Flax & Hemp company, which was organized at Salem recently under the direction of Robert Crawford, ex-superintendent of the state penitentiary flax plant, has signed up approximately 150 acres of flax lands in the Rickreall vicinity. The association now has more than 1000 acres pledged for planting during the year 1922.

The rapidity with which the shipping of the Columbia river is growing in volume is indicated by a report just completed by Deputy Collector Karinen of the Astoria customs-house. This report shows that 361 more vessels entered or cleared at the customs-nouse in 1921 than in the preceding 12 months and the increase in tonnage was 2,212,174 tons net.

Charges of bribery, directed at E. F. B. Ridgeway, state prohibition agent, whitewashing of the officer by the grand jury and charges of conduct unbecoming an official, on the part of W. I. Keator, district attorney of Umatilla county, will be subjects of a special grand jury investigation to be launched at Pendleton with A. J. Liljeqvist, assistant attorney-general, acting in the capacity of legal adviser to the inquisitorial body.

Increase of more than 200 per cent the last year in the total amount of United States treasury checks brought into Oregon for drill pay among units of the Oregon national guard is shown in an annual financial statement completed by George A. White, adjutant-general, for the information of the Oregon general staff. Government money put into circulation in the state during 1921 amounted to $199,052.56, as compared with $81,471.15 in 1920.

Sale of $450,000 bonds by the Talent irrigation district to a Los Angeles bank has been approved by the state irrigation securities commission. One unit of the Talent district has been previously completed, and the lands of the district are said to be in a high state of cultivation. The district plans now to develop the rest of the lands with the proceeds of the sale just made. Contract for the work, which will include the construction of a dam, has not yet been made.

Improper handling of trains No. 12 and No. 17 of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation company, which collided head-on recently at a point about one-half mile east of Celilo, was charged by the Oregon public service commission in an order covering the commission's investigation of the wreck. Records in the offices of the public service commission show that seven persons were injured fatally in the collision. Twenty others suffered injuries which necessitated their removal to hospitals. In all, more than 70 persons were injured as a result of the crash.

"Polite" Motor Horn.

The magazine Motor announces the arrival of the courteous motor horn.

Up to now the motor horn has been decidedly cacophonous. It squawks unpleasantly; it bellows alarmingly; it utters noises disagreeably suggestive of buses.

But the new horn, which is appearing on the market, has a tone that is at once polite and powerful. It warns, yet does not offend the sensitive ear. The tone-adjusting mechanism is so contrived and arranged that the horn is easily regulated for any degree of vociferousness, but it yet carries a warning to the pedestrian.

HORSE HAS PLACE OF HONOR

Body of Only Survivor of Custer Massacre Is Preserved in Museum of Kansas University.

The place of honor in the natural history museum of the University of Kansas is held by Old Comanche, an Indian pony. In a glass case in the center of the museum stands all that is mortal or immortal of a horse that has a unique place in the history of the country. Old Comanche never won a race, belonged to no certain breed, was of no celebrated ancestry.

Old Comanche was the only living thing that survived the Custer massacre of the Little Big Horn fight of June 25, 1876. After the battle, after the terrible massacre of Custer's troop of soldiers, the relief expedition which arrived the morning following the massacre, found a saddled and bridled pony, wounded but able to walk, grazing on the buffalo grass near the scene. A tradition says that the pony wandered across the prairies and found his way into a camp of United States cavalry. But the war record of Old Comanche states that he was found at the scene of the massacre eating grass and keeping faithful vigil over the bodies of the soldiers and the horses that lay bloodied about him, the victims of the bloody fight that has been immortalized by American historians.

Old Comanche never had a rider after the massacre. In the fight his rider was Capt. Miles W. Keogh, Troop 1, Seventh cavalry. After the recovery of Old Comanche an order was issued that he should never have another rider, but that in every parade or public appearance of the Seventh cavalry, Old Comanche should be led, riderless, properly draped in mourning, and with the colors. This order was carried out to Old Comanche's death, which occurred in 1892. In 1888 he was brought from Fort Meade to Fort Riley. At the death of Old Comanche the late Dr. L. L. Dyche, for years at the head of the K. U. museum, was asked to mount the horse and preserve it for the regiment. But the regiment had no money and the War department, unmoved by sentiment pertaining to a mere flea-bitten pony, would not make the appropriation. The agreement between the regiment and Doctor Dyche was that the state university should meet the expenses of the mounting, and that the War department failing to make the appropriation, Old Comanche was to become the property of the university museum.

The saddle and bridle which form "Old Comanche's" trappings are those that he wore when he was ridden into the Custer massacre by Captain Keogh.

Home-Made Perfumes.

Perhaps you, happy possessor of a yard with many little patios, flower-decked on either side, would like to make your own perfume, your own tinctures? It's very simple! And quite pleasing are the results of home effort!

Geranium perfume is so easy to make. Take the leaves of your sweet-smelling geranium, quantities of them, and pack them quite closely into a glass fruit jar. Then fill it with alcohol and put it away to draw new strength for several weeks, after which you will squeeze out the leaves, strain the liquid and put it in small bottles tightly corked.

You can make various kinds of tinctures in this way—tuberose, jasmine, heliotrope. With these, however, use the fresh blossoms instead of the leaves.

If the odor isn't sufficiently strong after the separation of the blossoms and liquid put more blossoms in and let the mixture remain several days or a week longer. Then squeeze the flowers out and strain again.

Round-Headed People.

Round-headed mid-Europeans have very different traits from the British and Scotch ancestors of so many Americans. Their descendants are long headed as they were and so distinguished by initiative, capacity to govern and colonizing ability. The Poles, Germans and Russians who come here in countless numbers bring other traits which anthropologists say must have certain effects. It may improve and it may harm Americans.

The round-headed peoples have a great capacity for patient labor, but are lacking in initiative. It is said the immigration of these people to Great Britain in the last 200 years has changed the cephalic index of the ordinary Britisher 2 per cent. The cephalic index is the ratio of the breadth of the skull to its length. Britons thus are said to be 2 per cent more round headed than their forefathers of 200 years back.—New York Herald.

Adapting to Circumstances.

He was a most useful man to have at a party, was Hugh Denicraft, for he always had some little game up his sleeve when the party began to twiddle their thumbs in the absence of anything better to do.

"Now, here's a nice game," he suggested, at Goldbug's party, when the fun showed some signs of abating. "A girls peels an apple, turning out one long peeling. Or an orange will do." "I see!" murmured the guests, one and nearly all.

"She throws the peeling over her shoulder," continued Denicraft, "and it forms the initial of the one she is to wed."

"Feelings, eh?" queried old Goldbug. "We are all very rich, here, you know!"

"Well, what of it?" asked Denicraft. "Will diamond necklaces answer just as well?" put in the professed daughter.—London Answers.

A man will start out to do in one year what could hardly be accomplished in ten years—and in ten years he will accomplish what should have been done in one.
