SOCIETY

Miss Nellie Hemenway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Hemenway, of this city, was married last night at 8:30 o'clock in Portland to Earl Carl Price, of Portland. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Roscoe B. Giltner, with whom Miss Hemenway has been making her home in Portland. Dr. E. Nelson, of Los Angeles, performed the ceremony in the presence of the family and a few immediate friends. An informal reception followed the service.

Miss Hemenway attended the University of Oregon where she was a member of Chi Omega women's fraternity. Mr. Price recently came to Portland from Texas. They will make their home in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Hemenway went to Portland Monday for the wedding.

An atmosphere of beautiful simplicity surrounded the double marriage ceremony of Mary Inez Pruett to Cecil L. Roberts and Lillie Myrtle Sutherland to Calvin B. Marlow which was solemnized Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at the Pruett home at London.

Nature contributed a perfect twilight as a fitting setting for the screen of ferns, cut flowers and evergreens on the lawn which served as a background for the bridal party which was grouped under two wedding bells.

Proceeding the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Banton sang "O Promise Me" with Mrs. Murry Newton at the organ. At the appointed time the beautiful strains of the Lohengrin wedding march announced the coming of the bridal parties.

The brides were charming in their gowns of white crepe de chine, trimmed with crystal beads. Each carried a shower bouquet of sweet peas and maiden hair fern. The service was read by the Rev. G. Earl McCoy, of Lorane.

Following the congratulations of relatives and friends the brides threw their bouquets into the crowd of ladies. They were caught by Miss Alice Truett, of Franklin, Texas, and Mrs. John Small, of London.

Miss Pruett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Pruett and Miss Sutherland is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Sutherland, all of London. Mr. Roberts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Roberts, of Gold Hill, and Mr. Marlow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Marlow, of Lorane. That all are very popular young people is evident by the numerous presents which they received.

Delicious ice cream and cake were served the guests on the lawn following the ceremony.

C. E. DODSON FORCED TO GIVE UP MOTORCYCLE

C. E. Dodson, who says that he came here about a month ago from Portland, yesterday afternoon gave up a motorcycle, which he has been holding, to the owner, Wayne McCue, of Creswell, after McCue had made complaint to City Attorney J. E. Young and local police authorities. The man claimed that he had found the motorcycle in the road near his home, on the old Pacific highway on the west side of the city, and that he had advertised for the owner. Although he gave the motorcycle back to the owner the complaint against him was continued for further investigation. It is possible that other charges may be filed against him.

USED FOR MARKING SLAVES

Almost Universal Custom of Wearing Earrings Had Origin That Was Exceedingly Prosaic.

The custom of wearing earrings in its primitive significance originated in marking the slave. Later it was adopted as a fashionable distinction.

From the child, hanging cherries on the ears, to the suspension of costly gems from them, earrings have indicated the love of adornment from centuries before the Christian era.

Today the dainty trinkets are made to affix to the lobe of the ear by screws which offer no initiating pain in the wearing—a decided improvement upon the disfiguring process of piercing holes in the daintiest part of a well-shaped ear.

Greek and Roman ladies gave much attention to beautiful designs, proof of which may be seen in museums, which preserve the ancient specimens jealously. English ladies wore them at the time of the Norman conquest.

There is an engraving extant of Elizabeth, queen of Bohemia, with an oval pearl in the left ear, and carefully affixed to a narrow ribbon guard. Shakespeare records their use by men. He is himself represented in a portrait with a thin gold ring in his ear. Van Dyck's portrait of Charles the First depicts the monarch with a sumptuous pearl, which formed the melancholy bequest of his granddaughter, the princess of Orange, after his execution.

Today thin gold wires may be seen in the ears of fishermen in some localities. Sailors were great observers of the custom, though one sees fewer now than formerly. Peasantry of Spain, Italy and Sicily, as well as gypsies of both sexes, are much attached to the use of earrings.

Most elaborate jewels occupied the attention of the old masters, who obviously appreciated their decorative adjunct to feminine features. Sometimes the "eardrops" measured three inches in length.

The jeweler's art has given of its choicest in designs for ear adornment. Josiah Wedgwood turned his genius to the manufacture of cameo medallions in jasper ware for earrings.

In the shops one sees today possibly a greater regard for the intrinsic beauty of precious stones; they are almost invisibly mounted, their alluring color and sparkle emphasize the delicate flesh tints of their wearers, and in the lesser values of the jeweler's craft ivory, jade, amber, tortoiseshell, coral, jet, all lend their aid very agreeably to the embellishment of the modern woman's ears, observes the Montreal Herald.

Camel a Champ.

The Saratov organization of the American relief administration claims to have discovered the champion Russian relief worker—a camel. This animal makes regular trips of 47 miles through the snow to haul sleigh loads of food, 1,800 pounds to the load, to the starving people of its native village.

While the average person is inclined to associate camels with hot desert plains, they will probably always be suggestive to Russian relief workers of frozen, famished regions. The camels have been found to possess an endurance if not a speed far beyond that of horses under the appalling conditions of the Volga valley. No railroads being available in the outlying districts of the valley, animals furnish the only transportation during the winter months.

As the animals, too, have been short of food, the A. R. A. is receiving several thousand tons of fodder purchased out of the $10,000,000 appropriation of the soviet government, and doubtless the Saratov organization will see to it that the famous camel gets a goodly share.

Finding New Uses for Wood.

New uses for wood continually are being found, uses which may be unfamiliar to many. Sawdust can be converted into a sugary food for cattle, forming at least one-fourth of the total food requirements without apparent detriment to dairy cows or to their product. Both wood and grain alcohol can be made of sawdust, as can be made, wholly or in part, smokeless powder, linoleum, sausage casing, chloroform, celluloid, ink and artificial silk. From wood waste we can make acetylene, varnish, paint and soap.

Soured Later in Life.

"I understand you've invested in a number of money-making schemes that didn't turn out well."

"Yes," said Mr. Grumpson. "And I hope my friends will take that into consideration when they criticize my disposition. I've been told I was an amiable baby and I know I was a brisk, light-hearted lad."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Her Viewpoint.

"If I were rich you'd accept me fast enough."

"Thank you, Ferdie, that's the most flattering thing you've said to me yet—and so unusual."

"What do you mean?"

"You and a lot of others have paid compliments to my beauty, but that is the first time one of you boys has given me credit for common sense."

To Be Exact.

Mrs. W. H. Blair returned Tuesday from San Francisco, where she had visited two weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. H. Somers. The Somers, who spent five weeks here, motored home, Mrs. Blair accompanying them. They made the trip from Cottage Grove to San Francisco in 29 hours driving time.

Fair Board Meets.

Preliminary details for the annual Lane county fair were drafted at a meeting of the directors of the fair in Eugene Wednesday afternoon, N. E. Glass, of this city, who is one of the attended the meeting. He had the honor of buying the second season ticket of the first issue at the meeting. One day will probably be set aside as Cottage Grove day this year.

Has Ancient Model Firearm.

C. E. Barney, of this city, is the owner of a single-shot Remington rifle of a model that dates pretty well back to Civil war days, which he accumulated at a sale near Cloverdale recently. The weapon, which evidently had been buried in the earth for a good many years, is encrusted with rust and of no value except as a relic.
