Smiling Porches,

More houses are being built with inclosed porches than ever before; you may walk down long streets of dear little homes whose porches smile at you through tiny panes of glass. You pass medium-sized places with grounds, comfortable houses set back from the road, and large mansionsin every one somewhere you catch the glimpse of an enclosed porch-room Old-fashioned houses follow suit, and back of the rounded Colonial pillars are fitted small-paned glass partitions that inclose the porch as efficaciously as though it had been built that way in the beginning. In the summer these are lifted out, leaving the porch as before.-The Designer.

Canada Pushing Honey Industry. It is expected that Ontario's honey crop next season will be marketed largely on the co-operative system, as a result of the activities of the committee appointed recently by the Ontario Bee Keepers' association, and with the assistance of the Ontario government. The honey will be graded and have a registered brand for the protection of consumers. Each package will have a distinguishing number, by which it can be traced back to the producer.

Snalls in London Restaurants. English officers who served in France during the war acquired in many cases a taste for frogs' legs and snalls, hitherto unknown to London When they returned home they demanded the same tidbits in London and now both frogs' legs and snatls are conveyed dally from France to London by airplane. Some of the London restaurants are doing an enormous business in serving these two articles of food.

NOW THE CRANBERRY "FARM"

New and Successful Industry Has Been Developed of Late Years in the Pacific Northwest,

Shortage in the cranberry crop in other parts of the United States last year has focused attention upon this new industry of the Pacific Northwest, which promises to furnish strong competition for the product of the eastern part of the American continent, as described in Popular Mechanics Magazine. After years of experimentation and selection and the development of artificial growing areas the states of Washington and Oregon have come to the front as producers of cranberries in large commercial quantities. Lewis and Clark, in the log of their trip across the continent in the early part of the Nineteenth century, mention the fine flavor of the wild cranberries purchased from the Indians along Columbia river. Cultivation of the wild cranberry bogs was not attempted until about thirty-five years ago, and continued in a desultory manner until recently, when a successful means of preparing growing ground was developed. Preparation of cranberry ground in the Pacific Northwest is an expensive undertaking, the cost being around $1,-000 an acre. A wild marsh is selected, drained by ditches, cleared of trees and brush, then the turf is removed by what is called the "scalping" process. laying bare the peat of the bog. Over the peat is spread a four-inch layer of clean white sand. Planting is the next proceeding. Vine cuttings are used for this purpose and are pressed through the sand into the peat with a dibble or planting tool. The vines are planted ten inches apart, which makes about 60,000 to the acre.

British Silver Stamping Explained. In this country the word sterling, when stamped on silver, means simply that the manufacturer declares the article to be made of silver eleventwelfths fine; but the British marks, arranged in column, give a sort of history of the article. Usually the first mark is the maker's sign; next comes a mark that shows where the article was made-for London, a leopard's head; for Birmingham, an anchor; and for Sheffield, famous for its silver, a crown. Dublin has the Irish harp and Chester uses the city arms. The third mark, a lion, indicates the stanchurch will enjoy a basket social and dard of fineness. The date mark, a supper at the church at 6:15 o'clock letter, usually comes last. Since each Tuesday evening. There will be a pro-gram. Hot coffee will be furnished dicating the year when the article was made, it is necessary to know the "plate" of the town in order to find the date of a particular piece.

Prepared by the OREGON TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION

(Practically every adult person is infected with tuberculosis. This infection need not be a source of danger. To keep the latent infection from becoming disease, bodily resist ance must be kept at its best. This series of articles shows you how to keep healthy.)

No. 3. BUILDING RESISTANCE

PROF. ALLEN K. KRAUSE, M. D.,

Johns Hopkins University Medical School, Baltimore. Man is the only animal that habitually and unnecessarily uses his bodily functions to excess—in overwork, overplay, overexercise, overworry, in prolonged mental and emotional stress, in unnatural hours of activity without rest. And being organized into communities, men herd together and thus establish continual contact with one another and become unduly exposed to one another's infections. In most men's bodies are little growths of tissue called tubercles in which lie concealed the germs of tuberculosis. These tubercles form spherical walls around the germs, called tubercle bacill, and thus imprison the germs. As long as the wall is strong and unbroken the germs cannot spread; they cause no illness and are no more to be feared than a common wart or a the skin.

If the tissues around the tubercles function normally, these walls tend to remain strong and so tight that few or no bacilli can make their way out of them and spread throughout the body. But too prolonged activity of the body as a whole, or of the part in which may be the tubercles, will in general bring about conditions that favor the weakening of the tubercle wall and the emergence of bacilli.

We heal tuberculosis by rest-of a knee, of the lungs, of the whole body We become ill with tuberculosis by reason of overstrain. Other diseases, especially those that cause inflammations and congestions in the lungs, whip up the physiological activities of the body and throw a strain upon the walls of tubercles. So do certain bodily activities, like repeated and long-continued work without sleep, pregnancy, childbirth, dissipation, etc.

The point where activity becomes overstrain is an individual affair. The miner, the broker, the farmer, the school teacher, might every one of them become fatigued by the other's ordinary labor. The phlegmatic and the irritable, the beefy and the wiry, respond very differently to the same stimulus, whether this be play, labor, exercise or dissipation. Every man's point of fatigue is his own, registerd in his own consciousness by sensations that all have experienced. Every rational man knows when he is tired or experience soon teaches him what will make him tired. And no rational man should push himself beyond this point unless he must,

To reduce exposure to all infections to a minimum and to balance one's activities so there will always be a healthy surplus on the credit side of rest, nay, more, a good reserve to draw upon in time of need-this is building up resistance. At thirty we build it a little differently than at twenty, at forty again differently than at thirty; there is a different proportion of details, yet principles and details remain the same.

Food, clean air, adequate clothing, decent hours of sleep, conserve and promote health-the normal body. But the normal machine was built for one man power and a too persistent effort to squeeze out more will sooner or later mean an overheated boiler and outworn gears; rusted, roughened and thinned out metal, and then-the collapse or the explosion. Then may an insignificant little tubercle become ablaze.
