

FOR WAR ON "LONG KNIVES"

Cache Where Indians Had Gathered Munitions Found in Cave in Wayne County, Kentucky.

Remains of what once was a flourishing "munitions factory" are sheltered in a cave 14 miles east of Mill Springs in Wayne county, Kentucky, in the opinion of Prof. A. M. Miller, head of the department of geology at the University of Kentucky.

This "factory," according to Professor Miller, produced arrow heads to tip the shafts of Indian braves whose no man's land, in the days before the squirrel rifle supplanted the bow, was Kentucky.

Professor Miller returned recently from a trip to Wayne county, where he prospected for caves, rockhouses and old Indian village sites, favorable ground for the finding of extinct mammalian remains.

"Two rockhouses and one cave were examined," he said. "In one of these, about fourteen miles east of Mill Springs, numerous arrow heads in various stages of completion were scattered at a shallow depth over the floor, furnishing evidence that this shelter formerly was an arrow head workshop of aborigines."

The other rockhouse also gave evidence of having been a popular resort of the aborigines. Human bones found in the cave lead to the belief that it had been used as a burial place.

SCARED BY UNUSUAL SOUND

Music (?) of Motor Horn Drove Lions From Oxen Which Had Seemed to Oxen Easy Prey.

The foot of a single motor horn has been found sufficient, in Africa, to quiet stampeded oxen and cause a trio of flesh-hunting lions to slink away into the bushes.

Two native drivers were recently conducting a wagon drawn by sixteen oxen to the railroad ramp. In the wilderness near Nakuru, the site of the new Usin Gishu railroad, when the oxen were attacked by three lions. The drivers fled to nearby trees. The oxen became panic-stricken and dashed down the rough road, dragging along the body of one ox, killed by the lions, with the swaying wagon behind them. The lions followed their prey.

This was the mad procession that greeted a lone motorist at a curve of the road. He had no rifle, and it was almost an unconscious movement that took his hand to the horn button. At the first sound the lions seemed non-plussed. The motorist then blew loud and long. As the uncanny and sustained shriek rose above the clamor of the frightened animals the lions slunk away among the rocks, headed for the shelter of the bush, and the oxen swung clear of the dust-covered automobile and came to a stop at the side of the road.

Heard Here and There.
"Opportunity," divulged the hen-peck, "knocks but once, proving it is not of the feminine sex."

"Might," explained the big man gently to the little man whom he was pommeling rather ungently, "isn't right but it helps a whole lot."

"Religion," cried the atheist, "is a lazy explanation of mystery."

"Things left unsaid," wept the unsuccessful flirter whose object of flirtation refused to respond with even a single syllable, "often hurt more than things spoken."

"Bah, bah!" answered the baby when asked his opinion of a piece of free verse just read him.

He Auto Look Bad.
"Good afternoon, Mrs. Jones!" exclaimed Mr. Brown. "What a coincidence, meeting you. I ran into your husband an hour ago."

"How funny!" replied Mrs. Jones. "And how did you think he was looking?"

"Pretty poorly."

"Well, I'm surprised to hear you say that. Everyone says he is looking much better lately."

"Well, he looked bad enough an hour ago," said Mr. Brown.

"I wonder why that was," said Mrs. Jones.

"Oh, I can tell you that," said Mr. Brown. "You see, I was in my car when I ran into him."—Farm Life.

CHINESE MINISTER AS CUPID

Jesting Remark Made by Wu Ting
Fang Led to the Union of Two Loving Hearts.

Wu Ting Fang was, while minister at Washington, attending the wedding of the daughter of the chief justice at that time. At the breakfast he asked one of the bridesmaids when it would be her turn to become a bride.

She modestly said that she did not know, as she had not yet had an offer. Turning to a group of young men, Doctor Wu jocularly remarked to one of them, "This is a beautiful lady, would you not like to marry her?" He replied, "I should be most delighted to."

"Will you accept his offer?" said Doctor Wu to the bridesmaid. She seemed slightly embarrassed and said something to the effect that as she did not know the gentleman she could not give a definite answer.

Meeting the Chinese minister at an "at home" a few days later, she scolded him for his bluntness, and he excused himself by saying that he was actuated by the best of motives.

A few months afterward Wu received an invitation from the young lady's parents to attend her marriage. The bridegroom was the young man who had figured in the unconventional incident. To Wu's agreeable surprise the mother of the bride informed him that it was he who had first brought the young couple together, and both bride and bridegroom heartily thanked him for his good offices.

EXCITED WRATH OF DICKENS

Great Writer, at His Best, Denounced Public Hangings, Which Were Disgrace to English Law.

Charles Dickens, at the time of the execution of Manning and his wife for the murder of Patrick O'Connor, was at his fullest power as a writer. In a letter to the London Times he wrote:

"I believe that a sight so inconceivably awful as the wickedness and levity of the immense crowd collected at the execution this morning could be imagined by no man, and presented by no beauteous land under the sun. The horrors of the gibbet and the crime which brought the wretched murderers to it faded in my mind before the atrocious bearing, looks and language of the assembled spectators. When I came upon the scene at midnight the shrillness of the cries and howls that were raised from time to time, denoting that they came from a concourse of boys and girls already assembled in the best places, made my blood run cold. When the two miserable creatures who attracted all this ghastly sight about them were turned quivering into the air, there was no more emotion, no more pity, no more thought that two immortal souls had gone to judgment, no more restraint in any of the previous obscurities, than if the name of Christ had never been heard in this world, and there were no belief among men but that they perish like the beasts."

Lao-tze Wrote Gospel of Taoism.
Lao-tze wrote the gospel of Taoism, from whose pages an immense religion grew up. Having been librarian of a Chinese king, and having much time for meditation, he came after many years to the conclusion that humility was the supreme virtue. He resigned, and desired to hide in seclusion. While passing through the gate of the palace on his way to solitude the warder besought him: "You are about to withdraw yourself from the world. I pray you write me a book before you go."

Lao-tze thereupon sat down and wrote a book about half the size of St. Mark's gospel. He gave this to the warder, passed through the gate and no man knows where he died. The little book is the gospel of Taoism. The word "Tao" means way—man of destiny. The advice that men should become like little children and act without reflection.

In Doubt.
One of our good housekeepers knows she has no ear for music, but when she is hustling around her pots and pans and scrubbing and washing out tea towels she cannot restrain humming a bit just out of her cleaning-up joy. Now there is also a little neighbor boy who plays under her window. Once while the process of scrubbing was going on above the little fellow looked up at the window with a face all puckered and serious, as if some question had been troubling him for quite a while.

"Well, Tommy, what's the matter?" inquired the housekeeper.

"A long pause—then, 'Please, ma'am, are you singing?'—Exchange."

Self-Starting Engine.
Automatic starting of an engine surprised the driver and fireman of a train at Beauvais, in France. The two men in charge were standing by their detached steam engine, when it suddenly started off, leaving them at the station. The engine, being short of steam, ran only six miles, to Herchies Junction, where it pulled up and awaited the arrival of its crew.

Grateful Son.
"My boy," said the millionaire lecturing his son on the importance of economy, "when I was your age I carried water for a gang of bricklayers."

"I'm proud of you, father," answered his offspring; "if it hadn't been for your pick and perseverance I might have had to do something of that sort myself."—Irish World.
