A person who has never done anything foolish enough to make people laugh at him has not done his share to cheer up this old world.

Few women plan on whom they would marry if they were free again, because one experience is usually enough.

A wedding was recently performed beside the grave of Ralph Waldo Emerson. If the love of either party to the contract should die the other party is likely to become superstitious.

None but the brave deserve the fair—but there is no danger of any other kind getting 'em.
