SOMETHING HAPPENED NOVEMBER 7.

However unsafe it may have been a few days ago to predict the outcome of the recent state election, it can be said now without fear of successful contradiction that it was an election full of surprises.

The election of Pierce by so decisive a vote was without the least question a surprise to many of his supporters, who were asking odds of 5000 to 10,000 votes in the betting. Thousands of democrats swung over to Olcott, but it is quite apparent that the number of republicans who slipped over into the democratic column was great enough to many times offset the defections from the democratic ranks. Nor can the entire credit be given to the effective work of the K. K. K. and patriotic societies. The truth of the matter probably is that if Olcott had been a strong republican candidate the normal republican majority would have been sufficient to overcome the Pierce K. K. K. endorsement.

It probably is true, although not susceptible of proof, that the circumstances which brought about Olcott's nomination in the last few days of the primary campaign, or which are credited with having given him the nomination, encompassed his defeat in the general election. Those circumstances prepared a fertile soil for spreading what The Sentinel is convinced were false statements but which it was difficult for him to fight either openly or quietly.

Just how great was the K. K. K. influence in the campaign will never be known because of the fact that so many other influences were joined with it.

An outstanding survival of the conflict is Thomas K. Campbell, who is apparently nominated for public service commissioner by a decisive majority over the candidate with the K. K. K. endorsement. In this case there were two candidates to split the opposition. Campbell did not get a majority of the votes cast and might have lost in a contest with a single candidate with the K. K. K. endorsement.

Campbell's decisive victory is all the more remarkable because of the fact that when he was defeated six years ago it was because of much the same kind of a campaign that would have been expected against him this year.

The only other candidate for state office who seems to have survived despite opposition by a candidate endorsed by the K. K. K. is J. A. Churchill, state superintendent. His eminent qualifications for the position, which his opponent did not seem to have, and the influence of the school teachers of the state, not an inconceivable influence, probably are responsible for Mr. Churchill's success at the polls.

With a governor who has indicated that he will cut the state tax in two and with a majority of the board of county commissioners pledged to a slash in county expenses, the dear taxpayers should be in for a most enjoyable four years. They certainly will have the support of all taxpayers in any move which can be accomplished without injury to the conduct of the business of state and county. It is the belief of The Sentinel, however, that the howl about high taxes will be greater two years and four years from now than it is now, largely due to the fact that the people are going to insist upon having things which will keep the tax rate just as high as it is now, if they do not force it even higher.

THE AMERICAN LEGION IN PEACE.

The American Legion is made up of men who were called to the colors during the recent unpleasantness with one of our neighbors across the sea. They also are men who since their return have dedicated their lives during times of peace to preserving for future generations the things for which Old Glory stands.

The American Legion believes that a preservation of our traditions in their fullest splendor depends upon education of the masses, both native born and foreign born. To that end they have joined with the National Educational association in the promotion of American education week, December 3 to 9. "American All by 1927" is the association's slogan and "Visit the Schools" is the legion's slogan.

Subjects for the week are such as these:

- "Universal Use of the English Language in the United States."
- "The Flag, the Emblem of Freedom."
- "The Citizen's Duty to Vote."
- "Better Paid Teachers, More School Houses and the School's Influence Upon the Coming Generation."
- "Care of Illiteracy."
- "Physical Education, the Needs of Play Grounds."

One day will be devoted to a war upon bolshevism.

Public discussions of these subjects will be arranged and advertisers will be asked to use the slogans in their advertising.

The members of the American Legion tackled a big job once which they put over successfully. They have tackled a bigger one now and their success with this will be all the more remarkable because of the fact that their army is not under military orders and it is not so easy to get the range of the enemy in peace times.

It has been brought home to us, however, that their work is a necessary one, as well as a noble one, and they should have the support of those outside the lines to the same extent that they did when the boys were on the firing line.

THE EXUBERANT FLAPPER.

The irresponsible exuberance of the flapper has in many families created the most strained relations. Mothers feel that their girls have broken away from customary restraints, and are distressed and alarmed by their free ways. They rebuke these tendencies sharply, and the girls feel personally hurt and are unable to see the mother's point of view.

Many people think these girls are allowed altogether too much freedom on the streets, that they are permitted to roam around at night in questionable company when they should be strictly guarded.

It is an exceedingly difficult thing to make any headway against the customs prevailing in the community at a given time. If all the girls are doing a thing, a conscientious parent has great difficulty in persuading her daughter to abstain from it. The young crowd often seem in league to obtain certain privileges and they combine to attain their purposes.

Miss A— tells her mother that Miss B— is allowed to do a certain thing, and Miss B— tells her mother that Miss A— does the same thing. Both Mrs. A— and Mrs. B— may be opposed to this practice, yet each assents that the other family allows it. The girls are frequently too clever for their parents.

In years past many women have met these exigencies by frequent consultations over the practices that should prevail in their families. A certain group intimately connected in social life would agree that their young people ought to do this and so, and they would enforce that standard, and the young crowd would acquiesce with entire content, because the others were all required to live up to these rules. Most of the flapper eccentricities of these days could be handled all right if the mothers acted more in concert and laid down principles of conduct for their daughters to follow.—Pine Forker, Pine City, Minn.

913 LIBRARY BOOKS READ BY PATRONS IN OCTOBER

A total of 913 books were read by patrons of the city library during the month of October, Mrs. William Esker, librarian reports. Of this number 659 were books of fiction, 43 non-fiction and 211 juvenile books. New cards were issued to 26 persons and 65 books were mended. Fines collected amounted to $7.57 while expenditures amounted to only $1.00.

THINGS WE THINK

Think Others Think and What We Think of the Things Others Think

All men are not created equal—some are born newspapermen.

A man who gets into a hole may be just filling his position in life.

Some self-made men should have let the job out to a jackknife carpenter.

The more money some people get the less they seem to know about using it.

A model wife may suit some, but we'll take the one who can cook for ours.

In the marriage lottery every man draws a prize and every woman a blank.

It's pretty hard to make a clean get-away with filthy lucre that doesn't belong to you.

The wife of a self-made man is always busy keeping him from making a fool of himself.

Show girls are great for paint, but almost any woman who paints makes a show of herself.

When you say the truth isn't in a person you don't mean that you have gotten it out of him.

Every man has an inalienable right to work—but some do not insist on exercising all their prerogatives.

There is more religion in a square meal to a hungry man than in the meatiest sermon ever preached.

There are 261 lawyers in congress—and a lot of others who think they know what the people ought to want.

The kind of advertising most folks like for their charities is to have it get out that they tried to keep them secret.

The trouble with winning a person by flattery is that you have to keep at it so continuously that he soon gets suspicious.

Women tell us what they would do if they were men. If they were men they would do the same things that they criticize us for.

The preacher who is going to convince folks that it is necessary to be born again, has got to put some life into his sermons.

A paragrapher says the poor girls are more affectionate than the rich ones. We have never noticed any perceptible difference.

We don't care whether or not there are marriages in heaven—but we would like to know if there are any moving picture shows there.

A chauffeur has been found guilty of polygamy upon the complaint of five wives. The automobile must breed terrible extravagance.

You can't expect to scatter much sunshine along your way when you keep saying things that cast a cloud over the faces of the one you speak to and cause the tears to fall like rain drops.

An eccentric millionaire has left five million dollars to be distributed in $5000 bunches to each male descendant born after the date of his death. Sort of an heir-loom.

Too many folks do things a certain way because someone else does them that way. This is the day when there is a premium on men and women with ideas of their own.

Some scientists now claim that the earth is hollow and open at both ends. If this is true, here is a chance to "get on the inside" that eastern capitalists have overlooked.

We use a jimmy to pry into the affairs of our neighbors that they don't want us to know and put a 40-acre field between us and the things they are willing for us to know.

The theory that some people have their brains located amidships probably originated in the fact that the way mother used to apply her slipper left such an impression on the mind.

Socialists complain that the working man is wasting his efforts for some capitalist. They should be as complaining as the capitalist who does not complain because all his efforts are wasted for those who come after him.

Being married to too many women at a time has landed one man in the New York penitentiary, where he will become attached to his surroundings by a chain with a heavy weight on the end. Another man has married one of the former's wives and finds the weight at the end of the apron strings about as heavy as the other fellow's.

It is not so much what we have as what we are satisfied with. The aborigine wanted only a hut or a cave, enough to eat and possibly something to wear in cold weather. He had all these things in abundance, and was, as a matter of fact, better off than his brother of today who has tailor-made clothes, a comfortable house, electric lights, telephone, city water, Wileyized food, etc., and is not satisfied with that.

We shouldn't find too much fault about the little false stories they tell about us—that may keep them so busy that they won't find out about the big ones that are true.

A conservative business man is one with $1500 in the bank who doesn't go and buy an automobile.

The best lookers may get that way from looking so persistently for a man.

The man who has reached the top-most rung of the ladder no doubt one day fought to overcome the same difficulties which seem so hard for you to bear.

"Debut," as used in connection with formal society is merely a polite, lady-like synonym for "butt-in."

Some men lose their heads—and others have wives who take them off.
