FOREST SERVICE TO SELL TIMBER NEAR CITY

330,000,000 Feet Douglas Fir on Row River and Layng Creek Easily Reached by O. P. & E.

Three hundred and thirty million feet of Douglas fir timber in the Umpqua national forest, lying along Herman creek, Row river and Layng creek, is ready for sale by the district forest office in Portland. The timber is of good quality and easy to log off.

lying within a few miles of the Oregon Pacific & Eastern railway. With an extension over a good route into the tract the logs could be transported to market in the valley with but very little cost to reach the rails, according to forest officials. Lane county will receive for the sale of this timber 25 per cent of the purchase price to go toward road and school funds and an additional 10 per cent of the amount to be expended by the forest service on roads and trails.

Storm doors are being put on this week at the entrance to both the Bartell hotel and the postoffice. W. E. Cooper is doing the work.

Four Men and Two Women From This City Take Active Part in Student Affairs.

By Richard Jennings.
Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Nov. 14.—Cottage Grove is the home of six students out of the 3073 registered this year in the Oregon agricultural college. Lane county is represented by 57 students. The men in college exceed the women two to one in number—2095 men to 978 women.

Virgil Alfred Powell, of Cottage Grove, is prominent in student activities. He is president of the student chapter of the American society of civil engineers. This organization is directly connected with the national organization of the same name and is composed of college students in civil engineering. He is also a member of Sigma Tau, a national honorary engineering fraternity. This body elects its members from the juniors and seniors in engineering having the highest scholarship records each year.

Clyde Anderson Burcham is a senior in military science and tactics. This course has been newly established in the college. Its purpose is to fit men for appointment, subject to examination, as officers in the regular United States army.

Ernest Curran Purvance is a sophomore and Ray Laurel Woolley a senior in electrical engineering. The course in which they are registered leads to a bachelor of science degree. The electrical department of the college has a well equipped laboratory where experimental work is performed. It contains motor-generator sets, transformers and all other electrical machinery necessary to carry out experiments.

Mrs. Ruby Godard is a sophomore in vocational education. The purpose of the course is to equip and prepare students to teach. Those who fulfill the requirements in this course are granted a high school teaching certificate.

Betty Stilwell is a junior in commerce. She is active in class and college activities, having been appointed on the Beaver annual staff which turns out the college year book. She is also a member of the Madrigal club, which is the women's musical organization on the campus. Its members are selected from the most talented of those who try out for the club.

PROTECT CONSTITUTION IS APPEAL OF SMITH

Commander of Battalion of Death Is in Fight for Enforcement of Prohibition Law.

An appeal for the protection of the constitution of the United States from bootleggers and others who are making the illicit manufacture and sale of liquor possible was made Tuesday night by Colonel Dan Morgan Smith, commander of the Battalion of Death in the World War, in his address at the Christian church.

His challenge was aimed at all who are connected with the illegal traffic but particularly to the business man who uses but little of the liquor but who furnishes the example for the youth of the town. "There never was so dangerous a red or anarchist in town," he said, "as the well known business man who breaks the prohibition law." Colonel Smith represents the World League Against Alcoholism. The United States is on trial now as never before, according to the speaker, as the world looks on to see whether this government can enforce its own constitution. In his travels over the world, Africa, China and other countries, he says, he has found everywhere a cry against the sending in of beer and liquors by this country. "The fellow who fights for his drink, now that the prohibition law has been made a part of the constitution, puts liquor above the constitution of his country," according to Colonel Smith. "You had a right to fight for liquor till the law was made but now you are a lawbreaker if you continue to fight for what has been prohibited. The bootlegger and the man who buys the product is selling the constitution that the soldiers fought to uphold when they went to France in the World War."

Colonel Smith made an appeal for the Americanization of the foreign born citizens. That they do make 100 per cent Americans under right conditions was evidenced by his illustrations of the bravery of American soldiers of foreign birth in the recent conflict.

On the platform with the speaker were Rev. H. B. Her and Rev. J. H. Ebert. Reverend Mr. Her introduced Colonel Smith. The meeting was opened with the singing of America.

STORE CROWDED FOR PUMPKIN PIE FESTIVAL

Six hundred or more people enjoyed the first pumpkin pie festival at the Umphrey & Mackin store last Friday. The store was crowded all day with people who were served delicious helpings of pumpkin pie, topped with whipped cream, and coffee. The festival was in every way a success, according to the proprietors of the store, and the event may possibly become an annual one on the calendar of the firm. An extra large sales force was necessary for the day to accommodate the large crowds.

Sentinel Is Link to Home Town.
"Keep it coming," writes Frank Woodruff, of Portland, in renewing his subscription to The Sentinel for 1923. This is the sentiment expressed by nearly every other former resident of Cottage Grove in writing to renew subscriptions. None of them wants to lose hold of their old home town and they believe that The Sentinel is the best medium for keeping up on what is going on here.

Do you want to buy something and don't know who has it for sale? A Sentinel wanted will find the owner for you.

POULTRY DAY TOUR DRAWS PARTY OF ABOUT 75

William Hands & Son, Bert Hands and Snauser Plants Inspected by Farmers and Students.

About 75 people made up the party making the poultry tour to ranches in the vicinity of Cottage Grove Wednesday. Twenty automobile loads of farmers and students left the high school shortly after noon, following luncheon in the domestic science department. The noon meeting at the high school was presided over by Ira P. Whitney, county agricultural agent, who headed a party of 30 people from the northern end of the county. On the way to Cottage Grove the visitors stopped at three poultry ranches between here and Eugene. E. J. Edwards, local Smith-Hughes instructor, and Mr. Gilmore, county leader of poultry demonstration work, were on the program at the high school building.

Problems of poultry management pertaining to the fall season were discussed at the meeting and later considered on the tour which included inspection of the William Hands & Son, Bert Hands and Snauser ranches. The event was well attended by the farmers and others interested in poultry, according to Mr. Edwards, who says that the interest shown in this day's work has led to the contemplation of another poultry day in the brooding season in the spring. A day for dairying and one for small fruits will be arranged for later.

Practically all sections of the Cottage Grove vicinity were represented in the party Wednesday.

Sentinel Necessary to Old Residents.
J. B. Simeral writes from DuPont, Wash., where the Simerals are now living to continue the visits of the Sentinel. "We must have it," he writes. A. W. Turpen, now in Modesto,

Calif., also writes that a few of their old friends and schoolmates still remain in Cottage Grove and vicinity and they keep in touch with these old friends through the Sentinel columns.
