A MERRY CHRISTMAS FOR ALL.

Here another issue of The Sentinel as ever more momentous occurrences will have taken place and Christmas for this year will have passed into eternity.

To our friends we wish a Merry Christmas, because they deserve it. To our enemies we wish the same, because it probably is not their fault that they know no better. Anyway the spirit of Christmas is the spirit of forgiveness, and possibly their desire for a Merry Christmas may be so strong that they will follow our lead and forgive us.

The Cottage Grove country has many things to make it merry. Many who travel through the cities of the coast say that Cottage Grove is the most prosperous city of its size of the many they visit.

Despite this there are many even in our midst who are in need, if not in actual distress. Let not those of us who have plenty say that those in need have had the same opportunities that we have had to provide a competence. Let us make it a Merry Christmas for all by making certain that on this day—the birthday anniversary of the Saviour—there are none to sit down to a bare table and none to shiver for lack of clothing and fuel.

These things will make our Christmas a much more merry one than to enjoy it by ourselves without thought of others or our fellow creatures. If to make others happy does not make us happier, then we have not the spirit of Christmas and do not ourselves deserve to be happy.

It is alleged that the jewelers are responsible for the return of long skirts in order to promote the wrist watch business. The dear girls can no longer see the clocks on their stockings—Corvallis Times-Gazette.

"HOMESPUN"

A certain small percentage of the people appreciate a gem of literature done in high-sounding phrase. A certain small percentage of the people will read a literary gem of that kind because they feel it their duty to do so—because they feel that it would be an exhibition of ignorance to have to admit that they had not done so.

But the literary gem that we all read, and all appreciate, is the one that deals with homely philosophy and appeals to the heart and soul within us, that deals with sentiments that come into our daily lives. When we have read we involuntarily remark, "Isn't that the truth?" or "That exactly expresses a feeling I often have felt," or "Isn't that touching?"

"Homespun," the work of Grace E. Hall, Oregon newspaper woman and poet, is such a collection of poems. The sentiments are so pretty expressed, the subjects are so close to the things that enter into our daily lives and they are told so artfully, yet so guilelessly, as to make the reader feel that the writer has seen the things we have seen, has thought the things we have thought, has done the things we have done and has trod the paths we have trod, with this addition, that she possessed the ability to put into words in a way we could not, but would like to be able to, the things she saw, thought and did.

The Oregon life instills love of nature and of the things close to our hearts; the Oregon climate seems to breed an ability to put into breathing words the things we think, and it is only natural that a poet who is gaining national fame should have been reared in Oregon.

"Homespun" is published by Dodd, Mead & Company, and is being distributed through the J. K. Gill Company, of Portland.

The number of papers issuing Christmas editions this year seems larger than ever before. One worthy of more than special mention is that of The Spectator, Portland, which this year surpasses the many more than creditable Christmas editions which have gone before. Other Christmas editions which have come to the attention of The Sentinel are those of the Milton Eagle, Condon Globe-Times, Junction City Times, Dallas Observer, Monmouth Herald, Hubbard Enterprise, Rainier Review and Corvallis Gazette-Times. The Condon Globe-Times got out 30 pages of all home print and the Dallas Observer 40 pages. Both of these papers are printed in cities about the size of Cottage Grove.

RALEIGH'S HOME IN DANGER

Proposal to Destroy It and Erect Cottages on the Site Has Aroused Much Protest.

The ancestral home of Sir Walter Raleigh may be destroyed. It lies in the west country, on the edge of Dartmoor, and is known as Fardel. Anciently it was the seat of the family of Sir Walter Raleigh; today it is nothing more than a farmhouse, but surely worthy of preservation, if only for its historical associations.

Raleigh's father, a country gentleman, originally settled at Fardel, where he owned property. His second son, John, succeeded to the family estate at Fardel, and there outlived his more famous brother Walter. Considerable remains of the old mansion of Fardel exists, but what has roused the protest of the Devonshire association is the proposal to convert the old chapel into a number of cottages. Such vandalism ought to be prevented at any cost.

The courtyard at Fardel formerly contained an inscribed bi-lingual stone of the Romano-British period. On the one side were the words "Fanoil Miquislini" and on the other, "Sapamul" with some Ogham characters on the edge. Local tradition makes the inscription refer to treasure buried by Raleigh in an adjoining field; and the local rhyme runs thus:

Between this stone and Fardel Hall
Lies as much money as the devil can haul.
Anyone who wishes to see the stone now must apply at the British museum.—Christian Science Monitor.

INDIVIDUALITY IN THE HOME

Arrangements Able to Reflect in a Thousand Ways the Personality of the Occupant.

On the subject of individuality in the home a recent writer has this to say: Individuality is as important to a house as personality to a woman. A room should be as sure an index to the character and taste of the person who occupies it as the clothes she wears or the books she reads. The truly interesting interiors are the ones reflecting in a thousand subtle ways the gracious personality of the occupant. A favored color repeated here and there—unusual bibelots culled from far corners of the globe—a rug that immediately challenges attention—these are the things that stamp a room and render it infinitely desirable. You are all familiar with those interiors perfect to the last detail—every piece of furniture of the right period and in the right place, and we all know how uninspired they are and how difficult to live in. Nowhere is the unusual touch, no sense of any personality breaks through. Everything is stereotyped and consequently dull.

Pat Beat the Echo.

Pat's command of language was wonderful, and as for arguing with him—well, it seemed absolutely useless, for he never failed to have the last word. "Now, Pat," said a visitor, who had heard of his fame, "I'll bet you five shillings that I can take you to a place where you won't have the last word."

"Done!" cried Pat. So the two went to a place where there was a famous echo. When they returned Pat was jingling his five shillings.

"Me boys," gasped one of his friends, "there's old Pat beaten the echo."

"Yes, it's true!" cried Pat. "Och, but sure an' it was a job at first. The thing came back to me again and again, but I got even w'id it. I spoke the last word under me breath!"—London Answers.

Helps Guam Farmers.

To protect growing plants from the strong winds which occur in Guam during certain parts of the year, the federal agricultural experiment station on that island reports the successful introduction of the use of the pigeon pea, planted around the garden in double rows. It makes a thick growth, reaching a height of 10 to 15 feet, bears large quantities of edible peas, and is effective without replanting for two or three years.

Repartee Extraordinary.

"They were two brilliant minds."
"That so? What was said?"
"One called the other a liar."
"And—"
"And the other retorted 'You're another!'"—Detroit Free Press.

A flexible engine for Winter motoring

Your motor will start readily and operate flexibly, in winter, if you use an oil that stays fluid at low temperatures.

The battery troubles, worn bearings and scored cylinders, experienced in winter, are simply evidence that the motor is bound with congealed oil and deprived of lubrication.

Zerolene Stays Fluid in Winter

Zerolene No. 1, No. 3 and No. 5, which are good cold test oils, move freely in winter with the action of the motor. They give a continuous flow of lubricant of the proper "oiliness" to the pistons, connecting rods and crank-case shaft bearings, and save batteries.

For safe cold weather lubrication, consult the Zerolene Chart at garages and service stations.
