WHY NOT PLAY FAIR?

If the United States had gotten into the war when it should have gone in, the cost to France, England and our other allies would have billions less and the cost to us might have been billions more. Americans would have paid the price without a murmur.

Our daily-dailying cost billions to our allies, part of which we lent them. Our daily-dailying probably saved us billions in money.

And now we are haggling over the money our allies owe us, entirely on account of our daily-dailying and we are haggling over paying a bonus to the boys who went across as soon as they could and were anxious to go home.

We could cancel the debts of our allies and set more than twenty times for what they did in holding the lines until we got there.

We could pay the boys who went across, or were ready to go, the amount that is due them and yet not be out any more than we saved by daily-dailying when we should have been fighting.

The American people would not have murmured had they been asked for many more billions to be wasted in prosecuting the war. Why should we hesitate now in turning over to the soldier boys an amount which would not equal what we would have cheerfully put up to have continued the war?

If we would have subscribed billions to be spent in using munitions of war with which to destroy life and property in Europe, why should we hesitate now to subscribe a smaller amount which would be used in building homes and promoting industry in our own land?

If we would have willingly subscribed billions to a war loan, why should we hesitate to subscribe a lesser amount to be spent for a more noble purpose?

If we believe in fair play, why not play fair? We can afford to do so.

A SOLUTION OF EDUCATIONAL TAXATION

Lane county members of the legislature are going to ask for aid for the rural high schools. Unquestionably such schools are entitled to aid. Undoubtedly they will get it, for education usually gets what it asks.

Monmouth normal, where are educated those who teach our boys and girls, is in dire straits. It is going to ask for further aid. Unquestionably it needs it. More than likely it will get that support.

The cost of education, now something more than 50 per cent of our tax bill, is mounting still higher, and there seems little likelihood of its receding. The cost probably could not be reduced without injuring the whole educational system.

We must have all these educational advantages, and we are going to have them. There seems little doubt about that, but some method must be evolved to take some of the load off the taxpayer, or sooner or later something is going to happen and we will find our educational institutions crippled. The emergency must be met before that something happens.

The Sentinel is of the opinion that the only way in which such an emergency can be met is to shift some of the load to those who are directly benefited by the expenditure of this vast sum of tax money.

We believe this would be better for the students themselves. Never was a better class of Americans produced than those who pushed back the wilderness and daily overcome obstacles that would overcome the average American of today.

Getting an education in those days was a matter of fighting for it. The comforts which the pioneers gradually gathered about them were the more appreciated because so dearly won.

The education that was fought for produced a class of citizens who were self-reliant and hardy, who shrank from no hardship, no danger. The sacrifices they had to make made them citizens considerate of their fellow creatures. They were resourceful and aggressive because they had to be or fall by the wayside.

With things coming as easy as they do today for young and old we are in danger of a lowered standard of citizenship, of a lack of appreciation of the manifold blessings and comforts which surround us.

If the growing citizen had to pay part of the cost of the many advantages that are his he would be much more likely to value them for what they are worth.

We naturally hold down the expense of the things for which we have to pay and if those who benefit by education had to pay part of the cost, that cost might be reduced.

Many benefits might come from shifting part of the load, and it is quite certain that we have got to do something of that sort or hit a different pace.

Education, to give greatest value, should be gotten, not given. It is only the things that we must strive for whose attainment gives us greatest joy. Education will come nearer being worth what it costs if those who get it carry part of the load.

But it is not our idea that getting an education should be made irksome or that getting it should be fraught with hardships which were overcome by many who yet are among our best and our most active citizens.

A method could be worked out that would not in any way interfere with the securing of an education yet which would insure a decrease in the future tax bill for education.

If every high school student should promise for each year of his attendance the sum of $10 to an endowment fund, and if every student of an institution of higher learning should promise $50 for each year to such a fund, it would be but a comparatively few years before there would be a fund the interest upon which would go a long way towards paying the cost of education.

The student's promise to pay, endorsed by parent or guardian, could be accepted at a modest rate of interest.

Such a fund would during the lifetime of many now living reach many millions. It would eventually compare favorably with the irreplaceable school funds of such states as Minnesota, where every ton of ore mined is taxed for the benefit of the schools.

Those who would produce this fund could make no complaint, for they would pay but an infinitesimal part of the cost of their education and would themselves be the greatest beneficiaries from the reduced educational tax that would result.

The endowment fund now being raised by alumni of the University of Oregon is along the same line here suggested, except that there was no advance promise to pay.

THAT DULL ACHING

Don't worry and complain about a bad back. Get rid of it! For weak kidneys, lame and aching backs, your neighbors recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor.

Mrs. J. W. Clark, 8 2nd St., Cottage Grove, says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills from experience. My kidneys were in a bad condition and I suffered with a continual dull, aching backache and had no energy and became run down. I also had spells of headache and the action of my kidneys was irregular. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me so I bought some at the New Era Drug Store. They helped me wonderfully, strengthening my back and kidneys and benefiting me generally."

Price, 60¢ at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Clark had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. 422-29
