FARM POINTERS

What smut has been well controlled in Oregon by use of copper carbonate dust, according to investigations by the O. A. C. experimental station. Cost, labor and risk of treatment is less than liquid bluestone or formaldehyde, and one-fourth less seed is required for a good stand. The plants are also more vigorous and healthy.

Average fleece weight on all sheep in the United States in 1840 was 1.85 pounds. In 1922 it was between 7 and 8 pounds. The increase is due to careful selection and breeding. It is significant to note that Oregon has many bands of sheep that average better than 10 pounds. The average for the state as a whole is around nine pounds.

Stockmen handling pure bred stock will find fairs are profitable means of disposing of surplus stock. There is no better means to show the outside world what you have.

The diversified farmer is the satisfied farmer, for his income is gradually increasing. The future of Oregon irrigation projects rests with the diversified farmer.

McKENZIE PASS CLOSED FOR SEASON FOR ROAD WORK

The McKenzie river pass is closed for the season in order that road building operations may be carried on. A steam shovel gang is now busily engaged in building that portion of the highway which is located across the lava beds. This section extends from a point 14 miles west of Sisters for about four miles westerly. The lava deposits are extremely rough and excavation heavy. Detours are impracticable and would be almost as expensive as a new road. The construction work now in progress over McKenzie pass will close the pass to travel until the spring of 1924, since travel over the route is impossible after October or November and the present road work will be in progress until fall.

CALAPOOYA SPRINGS SUBJECT OF INTERESTING ARTICLE

Story of Trip Very Complimentary to Resort and Southern Part of Lane County.

Calapooya springs, one of Lane county's most attractive pleasure resorts, was the subject of an interesting feature article in a recent issue of the Eugene Register. An attractive layout of illustrations of the southern Lane county country accompanied the story. Information for the article was gathered from a trip made over the new partially completed Lorne highway from Eugene to Cottage Grove. Here the road connection was made with the Coast fork road to the springs, and over Pacific highway from Cottage Grove on the return to Eugene. The distance from Eugene to the springs and return over this route is 93.6 miles, a little more than the distance would be over Pacific highway. The account of the trip follows in part:

Lorane, a peaceful little farming community with two stores, a church, a neat community meeting house, and several attractive residences, is reached at 32.3. Here the road to Cottage Grove turns to the left in the center of the town and the Sinslaw road goes straight ahead.

Leaving Lorane, a turn to the right is made a short distance from town and here the road shows signs of recent work. It has been rocked for a short distance and the balance has been carefully graded. Here real timber, giant firs of the first growth, is entered and from here on the drive is the prettiest of all. At 24 miles from Eugene the old road is seen from the left but the new road is now in good condition except for a short rutty distance of about half a mile.

The road from here to Cottage Grove winds up and around a series of hills and is smooth as a floor for the most part. A great deal of it has not been rocked, however, and in a rain this might make slippery going.

Cottage Grove and pavement are reached at 34.7, and the oil derrick of the Gunnamy Oil company is now a landmark of the city. It is perched upon a hill and is visible for quite a distance out on the highway. Cottage Grove itself is worth a half hour's drive. Many pretty new homes are being built and it is a neatly laid out little city with an attractive business section. A large sawmill is located near the depot and other similar plants are found nearby.

Leaving Cottage Grove for London, or Calapooya springs, the main highway south is followed until a left turn at 37.4 reading is encountered. Here the pavement is left behind for a smooth macadam road and in a few minutes green timber lines both sides of the highway, which is known as the Coast fork road. At 38.4 a new road to the right is taken.

Calapooya springs is reached at a distance of 48.6 from the starting point in Eugene. Here an ideal picnic ground is found with tables and benches placed in readiness. Nearby, coming up almost out of the river itself, is the famous Calapooya spring. This spring has quite a history of its own and was used many years ago by the Calapooya Indians, who made a yearly journey to partake of its invigorating waters. To them it was "good medicine" and warded off not only ill, but evil spirits as well.

But the last of the Calapooyas died some years ago and the name of the place was changed to London springs. The water, however, retained its name and a few years later the name Calapooya was again taken and the place made into one of Lane county's most popular health resorts.

A picturesque hotel, set among giant oak and fir trees, invites the travelers to rest. Within is a spacious dining room, ample for dancing. A reproducing piano furnishes all the music needed. N. S. Hays and his wife, who seem more like relatives than host and hostess, extend a warm-hearted welcome and serve what has come to be known as the best chicken dinner in the county.

For diversion there is a large swimming pool, 30x80 feet, that is filled with water warmed to just the right degree. The tank is equipped with springboards and a speedy slide. There are also showers and locker rooms. A tennis court, croquet grounds, swings and teeter boards complete the grounds equipment.

An interesting trip from this point can be made to the Black Butte mines, about five miles away. The road back to Cottage Grove is retraced, but from here variety is added to the trip by taking the main highway north. The road goes almost straight for miles and miles over a level country. Here the chief joy is in simply enjoying the smooth drive and, if the driver is daring, in testing out the car when other vehicles are not too numerous.

Three thousand people read The Sentinel each week. What have you to tell this vast throng? xxx
