

$540,731,000 Worth of Livestock

The remarkable growth of livestock raising in Pacific northwest (including California) is best exemplified by the astounding figures representing the capital investment of over HALF A BILLION DOLLARS in dairy and beef cattle, hogs, sheep and horses. Nor does this include the turnover in production each year.

Seldom, if ever, do varied livestock communities feel the pinch of price or production adversity, as do onecrop or one-stock producing sections. Balanced production, like balanced rations, equalize the good elements and counteract the bad.

Naturally, there is no place more interested in well developed and well sustained agricultural prosperity than the Bank of Cottage Grove, and wherever we can give encouragement to and assistance in bettering or balancing production, we are ready and willing.

The center 'round which livestock development is taking place in the west is the Pacific International Livestock Exposition in Portland, which this year will be held November 3 to 10. This has become the largest show of its kind in America, gathering together the principal breeders and more than 3800 head of purebred dairy and beef cattle, sheep, hogs, goats and horses; also 2500 chickens and rabbits. The Night Horse Show is unequaled outside of New York City. Why not give yourself the pleasure and opportunity of attending.
