WEEKLY LETTER FROM STATE MARKET AGENT

Standard Pack Protects Growers. Grading and standardizing of potatoes is now generally recognized as absolutely important and necessary to commercial handling. The condition of the stock at the shipping point very largely decides how it will stand in the consuming market in competition with other potatoes from another section or state. It must be up to standard to bring the standard price and when a shipment has both a state and federal certificate of its quality, that guarantee puts a stop to many sharp practices that have been worked against shippers and growers and prevents many disputes and losses to growers and shippers. Standard grading lessens the element of chance between the price paid the grower and the price paid the shipper. It guarantees that the potatoes in the sack are what they are marked on the sack. Fifteen states are now cooperating with the federal department on standard grades and it is but a matter of time when all states will come under standard grades in order to find markets.

Too Many Varieties. The market agent says too many potatoes are grown in Oregon that are of poor commercial value and advises that growers should find out the one or two varieties best adapted to their locality and stick to them. He says the Burbank seems to be a good all-purpose potato. It is practically free from disease, is a good shipper because it will stand up and is a popular table variety. As for seed potatoes for California shipment, there are several varieties that do well in this state.

Keep Hands Off. The supreme court of Wisconsin rendered a decision last month that, while given very little, if any, publicity in the press, is of utmost importance to cooperative organizations. The court made permanent a temporary injunction granted to a cooperative organization by a circuit court which restrained an outside company from soliciting or buying the product from members under contract to the pool. The decision is a sweeping victory for cooperative marketing organizations. In its opinion the court said: "We consider that the law is well settled that one who maliciously induces another to breach of contract of a third person is liable to such third person for damages resulting from such breach."

Wants Even Break. Often the propaganda is printed that the farmers and workers can never cooperate because their interests oppose; that the farmer wants a lower wage scale for the worker and the worker a lower price for food products. The farmer does not want the city worker to work for less pay. What he wants is a larger part of the worker's dollar that goes for the food the farmer raises. The worker does not want the farmer to get lower prices for his products. What he wants is more goods for his dollar, a bigger share of the middle man's tribute. Farmers and workers know the bridge between them charges too high toll rates. When they will they can cooperate and shorten the route between the farm and the kitchen—they can do away with much of the middle profits, expense and waste. The result will be that city workers will get products at lower prices and the farmers will get higher prices. There are too many making profits between.

Papers deserving second class mailing privileges would be glad to pay a larger rate if those that don't deserve them were weeded out—but if that were done there would be no need of raising the rates.

Some people gather knowledge with the brain, others with the nose. Single men shouldn't lead double lives. You can tell the kind of a road a man is traveling by the map on his face. Don't count your eggs until you see whether there are chickens in 'em. We presume many women spoil their ballots by insisting on adding a postscript. Apparent inconsistency—it is night that falls but day that breaks.

Some men become famous because of the things they do not do that the newspapers say they do. If the Europeans keep on playing horse, Uncle Sam may have to step in and set up a stable government. A person talks more presumptuously to the man who owes him money than to the person he owes money. A man with no legs and only one arm eloped with a Seattle girl. It is usually only half a man who gets a girl to elope with him. Staying out of politics is not a certain method of achieving popularity.

There's An Old Saying advertisement for Featherflake Flour. Features an illustration of a woman in a checkered dress holding a bowl. Text: "There's An Old Saying that 'bakings are about as good as you make them.' True, indeed, but the making begins with the growing of the wheat from which the flour is made and continues with the proper choosing and blending of the wheats and their proper milling. Featherflake Flour insures baking success if you do your part. It is milled from the choicest hard wheats. 'Light as a feather' when you use 'Featherflake.' The best stores sell it. Manufactured by Springfield Mill & Grain Co."
