Hottest Flame Known to Aid in Study of Planets

What is declared to be the hottest flame known to man has been produced by artificial means in experiments held to study the form of atoms. An electric blast, lasting for only a small part of a second, occurring on a charged wire, seemed to explode, creating heat so intense that it could not be measured, although estimates put it at 30,000 to 80,000 degrees. Pictures taken as the explosions occur are expected to aid astronomers in solving the causes for different kinds of light thrown off by many of the planets.

Grafting Cotton to Tree Makes Crops Richer

Grafting a single cotton plant to the root of a mulberry tree has produced 900 bolls, or pods, where formerly 40 was a good crop. The process, an invention of a southern plant breeder, is being widely watched because of the possibilities it offers in reducing the cost of cotton. Some of these grafted plants are nearly 8 feet tall and have well-developed fibers, called staples. The production rate is greatly increased, three mother plants giving about 60 pounds of seed cotton, or four bales per acre.

Small Dwellings Set at Angle to the Street to Give More Light and Air and Greater Security against Intrusion: Heat and Electricity are Supplied from a Central Plant

More Light and Air for Small Homes

Some of the disadvantages of small dwellings built in groups for the sake of economy have been overcome in Germany by placing the houses at an angle to the street to provide more light and air for each dwelling. Such groups are easily supplied with heat, electricity, and water from a single center. Under the German plan each of the houses has a little garden, secure against the prying curiosity of neighbors and equally protected against intruders in the front and rear.

ARTICLE SEVEN AN UNRECOGNIZED PUBLIC SERVANT

The value of any political, social or economic organization is determined by the service it renders to the individual and to society as a whole. If it helps forward the growing participation by more and more people in more and more of the good things of life, it is rated as an agent of progress. If it retards this participation in the good things of life, public opinion will destroy it. This is an infallible test. It is applied by public opinion working over a period of time and from it there is no appeal. If the institution is judged to be of value to society, it becomes permanent, a recognized social fact.

Army is Necessary

There are around 168,000 life insurance agents at work in the United States. This army of representatives is made necessary by the inertia and indifference which lie dormant in human nature and which make it necessary for men to be prodded not only into doing their duty, but also into taking advantage of real opportunities for profit and progress.

Need for Education

Since the chief problems of the present time are economic, our great need is for education in the laws of economics and in the practice of sound economic principles and policies. It is fair to say that the institution of Life Insurance is giving valuable service to the country by educating more than a third of our population in sound economic principles and laws. Life Insurance encourages thrift as the basis for an economic surplus. It provides a safe and profitable form of investment and this very investment becomes a school in economics. It stabilizes the financial institutions of the country by sending a stream of capital wherever it is needed for constructive purposes, and it helps to establish credit which is itself founded upon the knowledge of a man's character, not less than upon his economic resources. The man who has insured his life in order to make his family and his business permanent is likely to be a good moral risk in any business.

Million Wasps Are Freed To War On Crop Pests

One million wasps, the size of pin-heads, have been imported by the government and are now distributed in the East to destroy the corn borer. The wasps will save millions of dollars in crops for the farmer, if they serve as well as they have in Europe. Whether they can flourish in this climate has not been determined. The borer, resembling a caterpillar, attacks corn, beets, celery, beans, rhubarb, potatoes, buckwheat, clover, and many other products. By laying eggs on it, the female wasp kills the borer.

Women Inventors Are Busy on Industrial Problems

To learn just what part women were taking in inventions, government officials recently undertook a survey that showed over 5,000 patents had been granted to them in 10 years, more than the total for 105 years previous. The first patent granted an American woman was given by the British government to the wife of a Pennsylvania planter, for a device to clean and cure corn. Labor-saving machines are used to make up the majority of women's inventions, one making an apparatus for scattering fertilizer, another an article to strip sugar cane, while an adjustable horse collar was made by a Montana woman. For the kitchen, a pie pan was brought out that prevented juices from overflowing the rim, and a wooden mixing bowl was invented that would not split. Almost every line of business was included, but 1,385 patents were for articles of housekeeping.

Registration of Trucks and Automobiles as Reported Recently Indicates that there are now more than 13,048,128 motor vehicles in the United States, an average of one machine for every 8.5 persons. Between July 1, 1922, and July 1, 1923, there was a gain of 2,440,000, almost 23 per cent.
